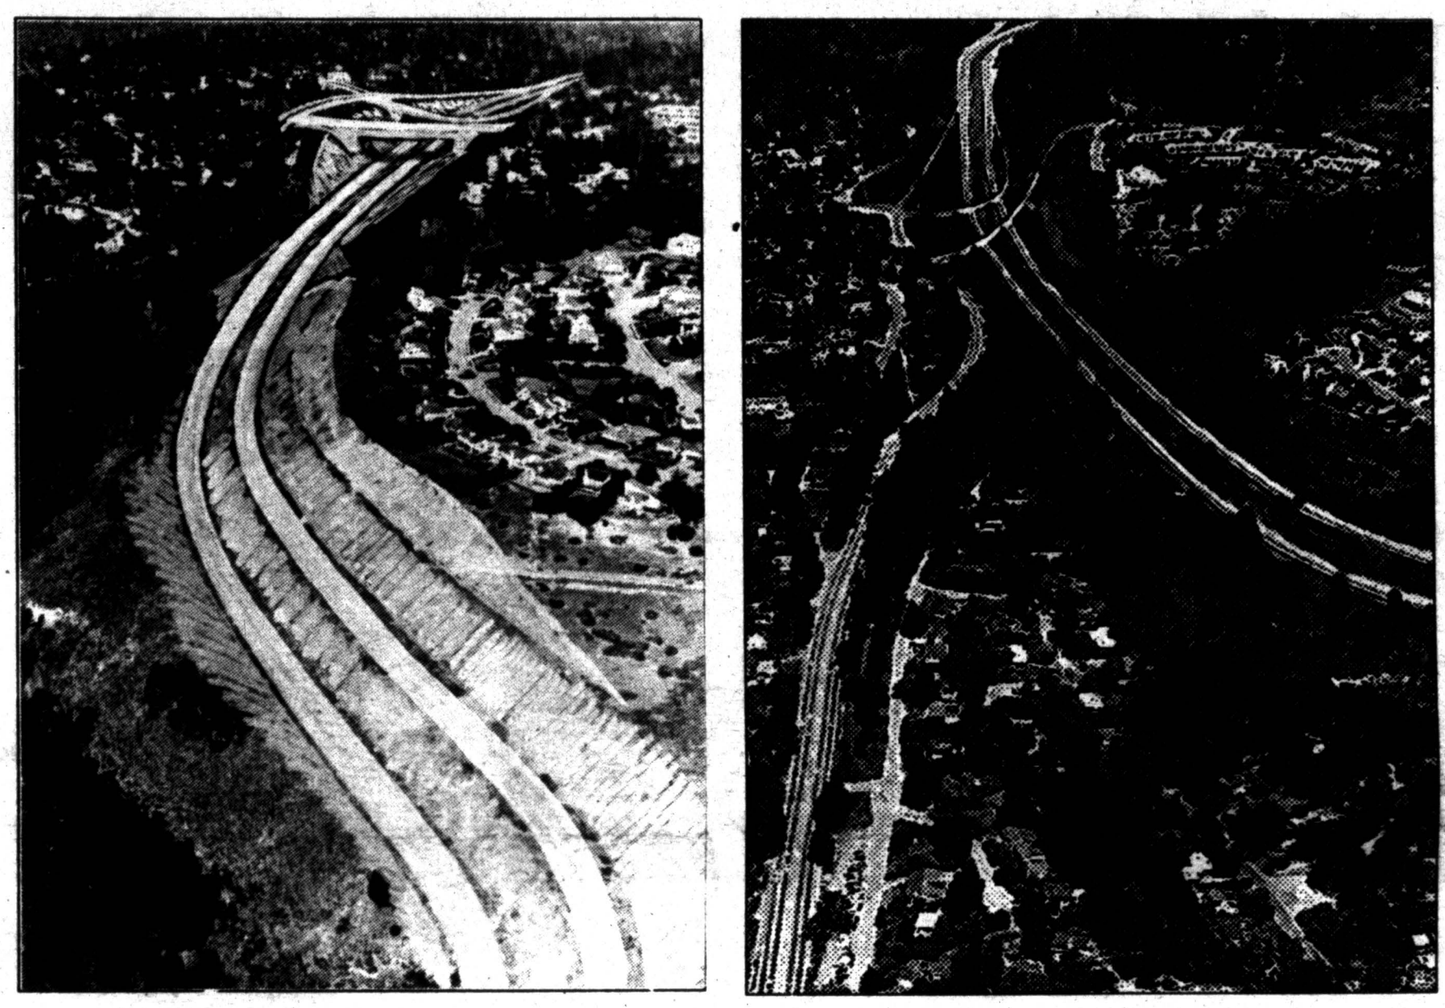
IS SEEING BELIEVING?



Two aerial photo simulations showing how the Carpenter interchange and upper portion of the canyon would look if the four-lane divided parkway is built. The depiction on the left was done in 1989 by retired architect Roger Larson. The one on the right was done last week by Caltrans landscape architect Gregg Albright.

Pictures tell story, but which images on future freeway are trustworthy?

By KIRSTIE WILDE

EVEN THE most earnest observer, eager to learn as much about the Hatton Canyon Parkway as possible, would come away frustrated by the images supposedly foretelling how the freeway will look.

On the one hand, there is a picture of an abominable scar on the landscape: a massive double road cutting away every growing thing and leaving only chalk rock walls on its sides.

The competing vision shows slender ribbons of highway weaving through a lushly landscaped forest.

What's wrong with these pictures? We are assured that each was produced by professional architects and engineers, superimposing virtually the same freeway design on actual aerial photographs of Hatton Canyon. But it's not hard to guess which one comes from the "pro-parkway" camp and which from the "anti-freeway" camp.

SPECIAL REPORT

Now that the Carmel City Council has asked Caltrans to create yet another expensive bit of fortune-telling, the question emerges: Is seeing believing?

Only one thing is clear: We will not know who has done the best job of prognostication until years after the Hatton Canyon Parkway is built — which of course may never come.

Information please

The Carmel City Council is officially asking Caltrans to build a new model of the 3-mile Hatton Canyon Parkway, so citizens can see more clearly how the four-lane divided roadway and its interchanges will affect the canyon, the entrance to the city at Carpenter Street and the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Caltrans says such a model would cost at least $40,000, take months to build and "may not be a wise way to spend tax dollars," according to Caltrans landscape architect Gregg Albright.

Other scale models have been done in the four decades that Caltrans has spent planning the Hatton Canyon Parkway. Old-timers remember one getting dusty in a supervisor's office, another was in city hall years ago.

"There was a beautiful one made in the 60's," says Albright. "The latest was done in the late 80's as part of the environmental document. Unfortunately, it was stored in a basement in San Luis Obispo, and it was destroyed in a flood."

Mayor Ken White believes that still another table-top model would help locals visualize the parkway, "especially the elderly who may be confused by the aerial photo simulations."

Bird's-eye or ground-level views?

Instead of another model, Caltrans is offering an alternative that is less expensive, easier to modify, and available right now via the World Wide Web: computer simulations superimposed on aerial and ground-level photographs showing before-and-after views of the parkway from many different angles.

At the request of The Pine Cone, Caltrans has creat-

Waiting to ignite: Highlands fire may foreshadow dangerous summer

By PAUL WOLF

BY THE time Carmel Highlands residents Wayne and Beth Franks were directed to evacuate in the predawn Friday, smoke from the fire's point of origin was coming ominously their way.

They grabbed their four-year-old son, Andrew and some valuables and headed for a shelter at the mouth of the valley. "We weren't sure if there'd be anything to come back to," Beth Franks recalled.

With gusts up to 40 miles per hour, the winds were on a vicious southwest path, signaling potential disaster to dozens of homes, according to Lanny White, fire chief of the Highlands Fire Protection District.

Traveling jewelry salesman robbed, locked in trunk

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A TRAVELING jewelry salesman was robbed at gunpoint Wednesday and then locked in the trunk of his car in the underground parking garage at Carmel Plaza.

The New York salesman had made five calls in Pacific Grove and one in Carmel before he was ready to head back to his motel at 4 p.m.

As he neared his car, pulling a luggage cart with several cases of jewelry, two men approached and threatened him with a small caliber handgun.

They forced him into his trunk, and reportedly made off with almost $100,000 in jewelry.

Minutes later, the salesman began pounding on the trunk of his car and attracted the attention of a citizen who called Carmel police. Sgt. Ken O'Donovan and officer Ron Spicer and a AAA tow truck operator rescued the man unharmed.

Lincoln Steffens' son recalls ostracism in boyhood Carmel

By TAMARA GRIPPI

As a child growing up in Carmel in the 1930s, Pete Steffens was flattered when a man named Sharky befriended him.

Sharky was always glad to have young Pete over to his Scenic Road rental to talk about sports and show his collection of barbells.

Author Lincoln Steffens and his young son Pete are shown here in an Edward Weston photograph, dating back to the early 1930s. The picture was taken in Carmel. As a boy, Pete often contended with people whose aim was to undermine the welfare of his parents, who espoused socialist beliefs.

It wasn't until much later that Pete found out Sharky wasn't interested in his friendship at all. Nor was he the former boxer he claimed to be.

Sharky wasn't even his real name.

Pete and his family found out that "Sharky" had bugs all over his house because he had been sent by shipowners and "patriotic groups" in San Francisco to spy on Pete's parents — Lincoln Steffens, the muckraker, and his wife Ella Winter — a couple who sympathized with labor causes and socialist ideals.

"This guy broke my heart," he said, speaking before a Carmel audience Monday evening, in a 90-minute talk, "The Hazards of Growing up in Carmel, at Sunset Center. "I lost

Planning department: Scenic port-a-potties not a blight

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL Planning Department has concluded that the twin portable bathrooms at Scenic and Santa Lucia are neither a blight nor a health hazard for the community.

On Monday, the department published its initial environmental study, which recommends that the city allow the twin port-a-potties to remain without undertaking an environmental impact report. It is possible, however, that the California Coastal Commission may step in and require an EIR anyway.

"You'd have to be blind not to recognize the impacts," said Howard Herning, a Scenic Road resident who has joined others on his street to oppose the turquoise restrooms, installed last year and now hidden behind a redwood fence.

Many Scenic Road property owners say the facilities depreciate property values, pose a health hazard, violate the city's land use codes and constitute a visual blight.

The planning staff report is being circulated in advance of the June 18 planning commission hearing. The Carmel City Council is slated to address the negative declaration/EIR dilemma on July 8. A date before the coastal commission has not been set.

Carmel Senior Planner Rick Tooker said that the staff's study does not find significant impacts in the following areas:

Burleigh: Race to go on, whatever alcohol, T-shirts sale rules

By PAUL WOLF

THE DIRECTOR of the Fine Arts 5K said the race can thrive without complimentary champagne or T-shirt sales — attractions at last year's event that, in retrospect, are dimly viewed by members of the Carmel City Council.

"We like Carmel, too, and we certainly don't want to do anything that would jeopardize the village as we know it," said race director Bill Burleigh.

The race last Oct. 5 raised about $10,000 for the Carmel Open Space Task Force, Burleigh said. Of that sum, $800 came directly from the sales of sweatshirts and caps, sold from behind a table at the Del Mar parking lot, at the foot of Ocean Avenue near Carmel Beach.

By paying to compete in the race, runners received free T-shirts and complimentary champagne. Other apparel bearing the race's logo was also available for purchase.

In an uncharacteristically lenient move (for a town that tries hard to limit commercialism) the city had changed its rules to permit the Fine Arts 5K to "sell" T-shirts and alcohol near the beach . City Attorney Don Freeman told The Pine Cone that other special events could request a permit to do the same.

On May 6, council members had second thoughts and turned the issue over to the Carmel Beach Master Plan Task Force for study, with the implication that they'd like to end the practice before it gets out of hand.

"The city would be hard-pressed to say no to other groups until they close the door on all groups," Freeman said.

Mayor Ken White was concerned about pulling the rug out from under the Fine Arts 5K at the last minute: "It wouldn't be fair and just for any new rules suddenly to apply to this year's race," said told The Pine Cone Monday.

But it may be a moot point, because Burleigh plans to recommend that his board cancel the champagne and T-shirt sales this year, even if Carmel permits them. "If the council is concerned about this activity, I don't want to pursue it," he said.

Burleigh (who also founded the Big Sur Marathon) has an alternative: sell the merchandise at the Vista Lobos meeting hall the day before the 5K at the same time runners pick up their numbers and race packets.

Hundreds of fired Asilomar workers offered jobs back

■ Fifty-seven employees won't be rehired

By KIRSTIE WILDE

DELAWARE NORTH, the private company poised to take over the Asilomar Conference Grounds on June 1, has offered 208 people jobs under the new management.

All 265 workers at Asilomar were given termination notices last month by the Asilomar Operating Company when it lost its contract to run the conference grounds after half a century.

Rick Morrissey, the new general manager of Asilomar, says about 57 employees who were fired will not be taken back, because they did not meet Delaware North's standards in either the interview process, the criminal background check or the drug test.

Early on, the workers were assured that Delaware North would not lower wages, and that, for the most part, is how it turned out, according to Morrissey. Less than 2 percent of the employees had to take a pay cut, and all of their accrued vacation will be paid by the old management on May 31. Some of the Asilomar employees have been on the job for as long as 35 years.

Of the 17 managers, all but two have been offered positions with the new company. Director of Operations Michael Becker will not be staying on.

There are opportunities for job hunters at Asilomar, too. Morrissey says Delaware North will be hiring at least 30 people in the dining room, kitchen, housekeeping and maintenance departments.

Asilomar pays $655,000 each year in hotel taxes, which is the major source of funding for police and fire protection in Pacific Grove.

A SHAGGY DOG'S TALE

In last week's Pine Cone, we noted that Carmel law enforcement had to curb the use of a costumed dog to advertise a local sportswear shop. The city's code enforcement officer said the dog must not cavort on the street since that is illegal and out of character for Carmel. We mistakenly indicated that police were talking about an actual canine, but as you can see, the Big Dog mascot in fact has two legs and waves bye-bye. His owners at Big Dog Sportswear on Ocean say the children love the mascot, and he will entertain them only inside the store from now on.

STEFFENS

a part of trust for people for the rest of my life."

As incongruous as espionage and redbaiting in Carmel might sound, Pete Steffens, now a journalism professor in Washington, learned at a young age about the ruthlessness of the world around him. He could choose his parents politics no more than he could choose his parents. Most unfortunate, however, was how those who opposed his parents' beliefs had no qualms about using him for their own ends.

One man's evolution

Lincoln Steffens, dubbed the quintessential muckraking journalist, became interested in socialism after his years of uncovering the corruption in American politics and society.

After World War I, Steffens met Winter, 33 years his junior, in Paris. The couple traveled around Europe together and, in 1925, Pete was born.

The family moved to Carmel in 1927 and settled in a house they called the "Getaway." "I feel like I could stay here forever," Lincoln Steffins wrote at the time.

After the Depression began, Ella Winter took a trip to Russia and wrote a book, titled significantly, "Red Virtue." She came back to Carmel and organized a John Reed Club to study communism.

The couple began to run into trouble when they supported the longshoreman's strike in San Francisco. Life became increasingly uncomfortable for the couple in Carmel.

On one occasion, headlines in the local paper reported that Pete Steffens had urinated on the Sunset School building. During Monday's talk, he set the record straight — it was on a tree, not a building.

During another incident, the same Sharky character brought a machine gun to Steffen's house and encouraged Ella Winter to try holding it. Winter declined, but found out later that Sharky had a photographer ready to take a picture of her with the gun to use as propaganda showing her as a dangerous radical.

Trying to understand

Young Pete had a difficult time understanding why people had so much hostility against his parents. During a mock presidential election at Sunset School in 1935, Pete was the only one in the class who said he would vote for Earl Browder, the communist candidate.

He recalls many of his parents' friends as being good people with altruistic tendencies. "I was stunned that it wasn't a good thing to be a communist," Steffens said.

■ For those who missed Pete Steffens in person on Monday, the talk can be viewed on videotape at the Harrison Memorial Library's Local History Room, which sponsored the talk.

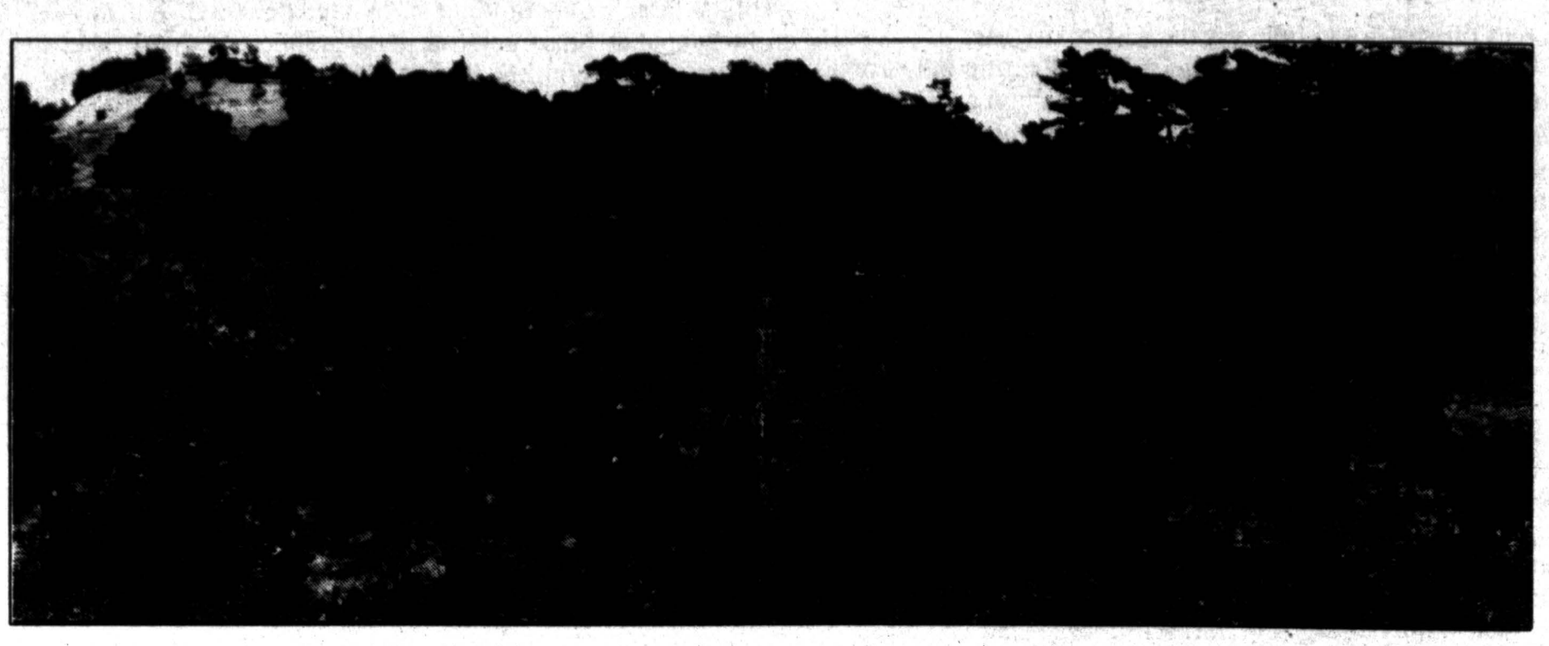
ed and uploaded several brand new views of the planned parkway onto its electronic home page, and they can be viewed 24-hours a day via computer. (See related story.)

Albright says computer simulations give a human perspective as well as a bird's-eye view. "The simulations are better than models because you can't put your face down into a model to see how the structures will actually look to people on the ground ."



When viewed from the side, the parkway seems to disappear. This Caltrans simulation shows the stair-stepped road and the pedestrian-wildlife crossing underneath. See page 9 for other images.

Suspicious of 'virtual reality'

Will Caltrans' computer simulations satisfy those who are worried that the parkway will be, as it is described by the Hatton Canyon Coalition, a "Los Angeles-style massive cut-and-fill megastructure freeway?"

Some active with the coalition are very suspicious of the Caltrans simulations. "They're doctored to make the freeway look good," says Carmel resident Enid Sales. "In their 'virtual reality,' they show tall lush trees on steep slopes, where in actual reality trees won't grow."

Roger Larson — the architect who did the renderings for the anti-freeway coalition eight years ago and who moved to Port Ludlow, Wash., to "get away from the freeway" — says the chalk rock of the canyon will not support regrowth of pine trees along the cuts created by the construction.

"That's not true," counters Albright, a professional landscape architect who created many of the Caltrans simulations, and who says the Larson depictions are out of scale and misleading.

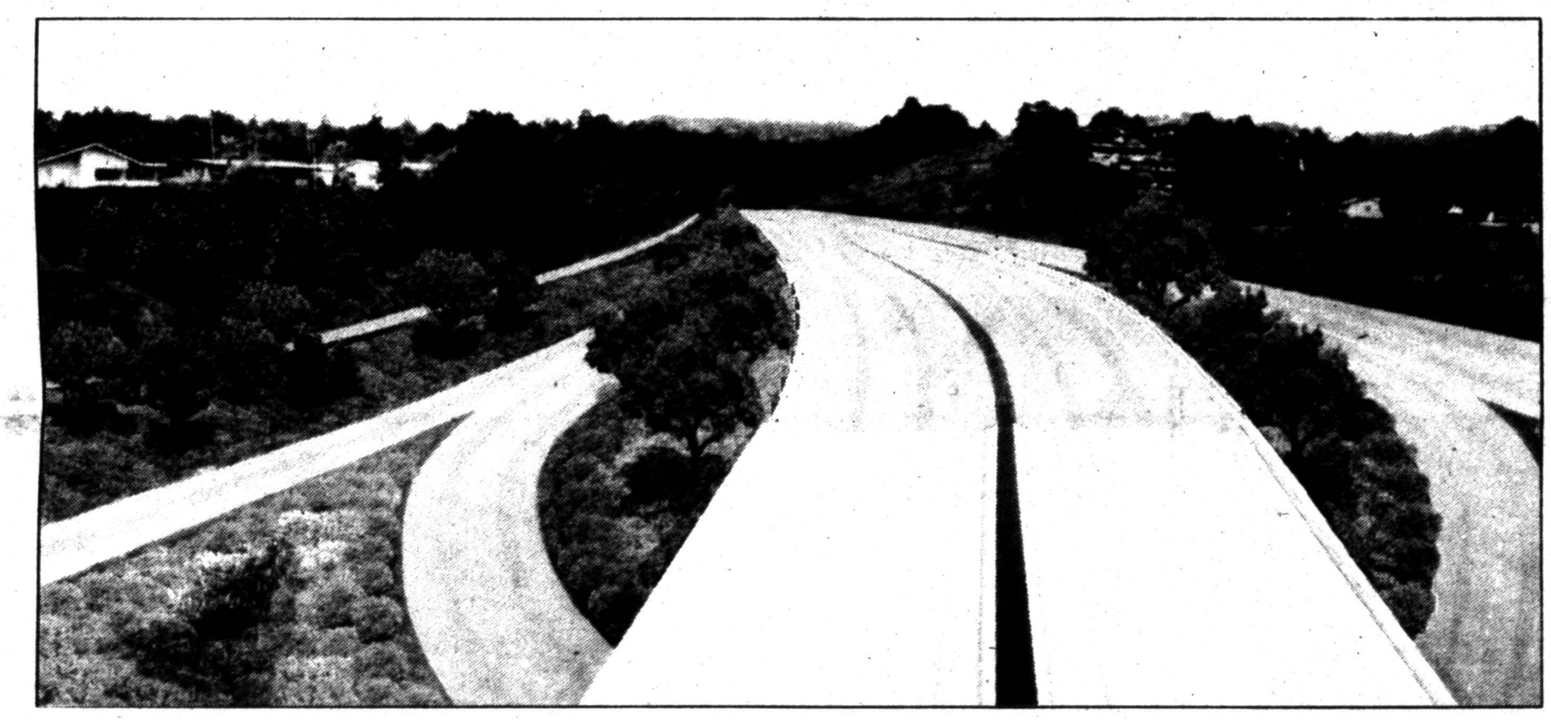
"Our simulations are accurate and were used extensively in the environmental impact report. They show proper scale, perspective, and landscaping where it will grow." No big trees overnight, of course, but five to ten years after construction.

The anti-freeway coalition has spent tens of thousands of dollars to hire private engineers, architects and other consultants to study Caltrans' parkway design, make their own simulations, and offer alternatives.

One of their designs shows a two-lane road through Hatton Canyon (instead of four) with a tunnel at the upper end instead of the large 'cuts' in the Caltrans plan.

That alternative design also widens Highway 1 by one lane and includes an elevated interchange that would let drivers head east onto Carmel Valley Road without stopping. The Coalition members believe that if Caltrans would only consider a more modest alternative, the traffic mess could be solved and more of Hatton Canyon could be spared.

They filed another lawsuit last week, asking that the agreement to build the freeway be thrown out until more environmental studies are done.



When viewed from above, this Caltrans simulation depicts a project that has much more obvious impacts. The view is of the proposed Carmel Valley Road interchange looking north. Carmel Knolls is on the right.

Alternative to expanding Highway 1

The pro-parkway group, Citizens for Hatton Canyon, is working just as hard to get the $46 million parkway built.

Its members believe that overcrowding on Highway 1 is destroying that official scenic highway, and choking the village. They do not want to expand Highway 1 to four or six lanes as an alternative to the canyon parkway, and they have other computer simulations to explain why. Those show a widened Highway 1 with sound walls hundreds of feet long, and large bare patches in place of mature trees that now block the view of the road from nearby homes. The Highway 1 corridor isn't wide enough to plant replacement trees in a 5-to-1 ratio, as is promised in Hatton Canyon.

"We really believe the Hatton Canyon parkway as designed will be attractive," says Lois Starnes. "It has been refined several times since those old models were done in the 60's. There is a lot of room for landscaping. No other roadway in the state has had more attention to aesthetics than this one."

The two outspoken groups, with their opposing simulations of how the future will look with or without the Hatton Canyon Parkway, mirror a split in the community.

The last survey, of 5000 Carmel voters and property owners done in 1991 by Voice of Carmel, showed 50 percent supporting the parkway, 37 percent supporting a wider Highway 1 and 12 percent in favor of doing nothing.

Time to study the simulations?

If Caltrans declines to build another parkway model, and if many locals are not computer literate enough to access the simulations on the internet, what can be done to help freeway backers and fighters come to some agreement on how to build the most-attractive parkway or Highway 1 expansion? Mayor White is open to the idea of distributing the 36 Caltrans simulations, suggesting that they be displayed at the post office or city hall.

In the past, White declined to put up photo simulations offered by the pro-parkway group, Citizens for Hatton Canyon, because he believed they were privately drawn and partisan.

"As long as they are the official Caltrans simulations, I'd consider putting them on display," he said.

How to access Caltrans' images of Hatton Canyon freeway

TO VIEW the nine new computer simulations created by the landscape architects at Caltrans, you can access the Caltrans San Luis Obispo office website at this address: http://www.dot.ca.gov/dist05.

The new views show the Carpenter Street interchange, the lower Hatton Canyon stretch of parkway, and the Rio Road overpass looking east and west. You will see the areas as they exist now, how they would look immediately after construction, and how Caltrans envisions them with mature landscaping.

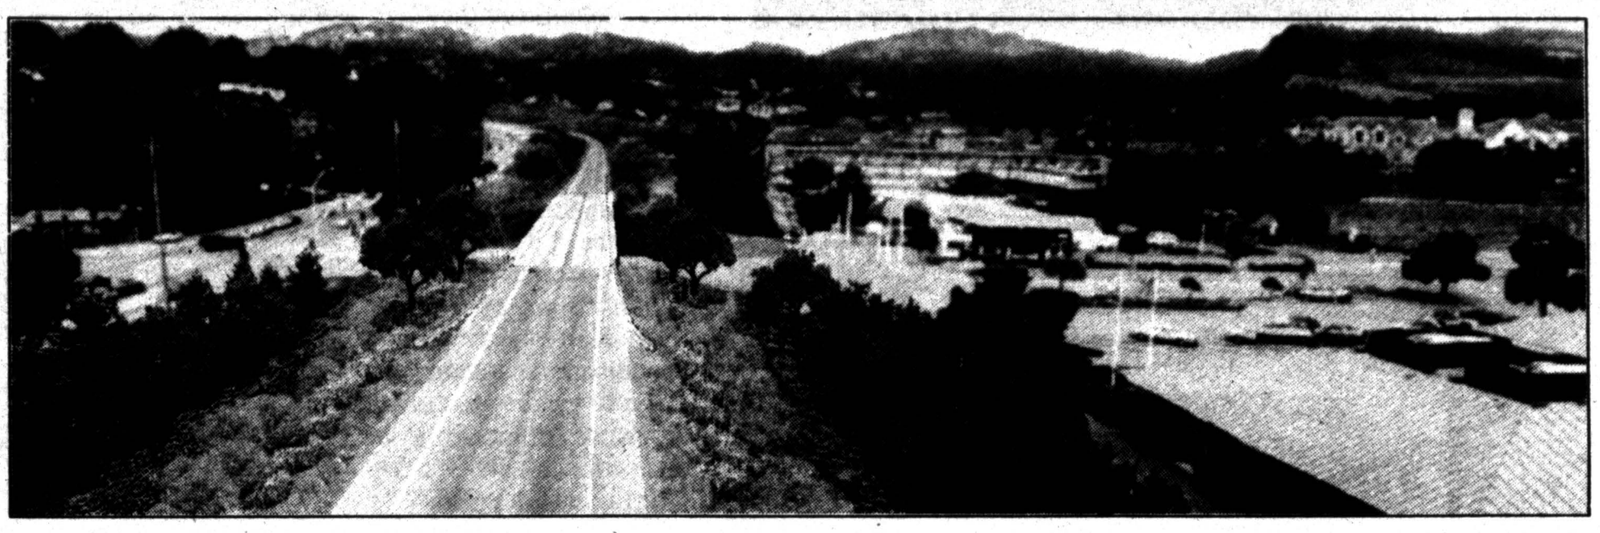
The Rio Road overpass has been described by freeway opponents as a 'Berliin Wall' along the Mission Fields subdivision. It will block views of The Crossroads and Barnyard shopping centers across present-day Highway 1.



In this Caltrans' simulation, you can see the end of the parkway as it passes over Rio Road on its way to the Carmel River Bridge. The Crossroads Shopping Center is on the far right; Highway 1 is barely visible on the left.

Setting The Record Straight

■ Refining Carla Ramsey's quote on the housing market

In a May 8 article, "Realtors fear design review to lead to stricter regulations," The Pine Cone quoted Realtor and Carmel resident Carla Ramsey in a way that implied she did not value regulating coverage and setbacks in the residential districts.

Ramsey has told the newspaper that overly strict standards and open space requirements limit the creativity and variety of home designs.

We regret the misinterpretaton of Ramsey's comments.

Eighth-grader Tyler Wood (center) of Carmel Valley has won first place in the national Spanish language competition. His perfect score (60 of 60) on the American Association of Teachers of Spanish exam is all the more impressive considering he was competing against 75,000 high school students across the nation.

Tyler narrowly bested classmates Ben Patton and Michelle Marquard, who scored second and third in the nation. All are students of Sarah Slautterback at All Saints' School in the valley.

PORT-A-POTTIES

- Aesthetics.
- Noise.

- Land use regulations.

David Sweigert, an attorney representing Robert Kinkead, one of the Scenic Road property owners, disagreed with the argument that the portable toilets are consistent with city's general plan.

For starters, he contended that the port-a-potties violate a component of the general plan — the 1981 Carmel Local Coastal Program Land Use Plan, which allows for only "portable facilities used as a supplement" during periods of peak foot traffic.

"The city's attempt to sneak an additional bathroom ... is a violation of the law," he said.

Sweigert said his client objects to the city staff's conversion of temporary facilities into permanent ones without coastal commission approval.

Sweigert also charges that the city has other port-a-potties in the works. But City Forester Gary Kelly says a plan to install one at Scenic and Eighth was discarded after an outpouring of local opposition. "It's a dead issue," he said.

The port-a-potties in question.

As for the porta-potties at Santa Lucia, Kelly said, "It's a long way to the bathrooms at the Del Mar lot (at the foot of Ocean Avenue). We are filling a need not just for the visitors but for residents. This is only one solution."

Before the portable bathrooms were installed, people were using the bluffs to relieve themselves.

The twin porta-potties are rented by the city from the Carmel Marina Corp., the city's private garbage hauler. The company cleans the bathrooms three to five times a week.

Meanwhile, Kelly said the city recently had an excellent testimonial to the effectiveness of the redwood screening. An official from the coastal commission came to town to inspect the building — and he couldn't find it.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

In 401(k) retirement plans, workers allot a percentage of pay for regular deposit to their accounts, and employers usually add a contribution. Participation has surged in recent years, but relatively few small businesses have set up 401(k) plans. To make it easier for companies with fewer than 100 employees to do so, Congress has approved a Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees (SIMPLE). It imposes fewer rules and less paperwork than conventional 401(k)s, and its formula for contributions is different. Some critics say that SIMPLE is "top heavy," shaped to slow an employee to maximize savings for retirement.

Their enterprise grew into the largest family-owned honey operation in the U.S. The corporation processes as much as 40 million pounds of honey in a modern plant. At age 84, Ralph Gamber continues on the job, sometimes driving a forklift.

Planning Commission: Ordinance to guard against 'city of towers'

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Planning Commission approved an ordinance to make sure that a new technology of wireless communication systems won't crowd the city with unsightly towers and antennas.

The technology — authorized by the federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 — allows providers such as Pacific Bell or Sprint to use a new kind of transmission to provide a portable phone service similar to cellular phones.

Through a system of antennas, the high-frequency, low-power transmissions can provide communication between cars, people, homes, businesses and the computer internet without wires. For the system to work, a town like Carmel would have to have three to four antennas stationed around the village.

The city council was worried about unsightly antennas, and didn't have a way to regulate them, so council adopted a one-year moratorium on wireless communications last September.

"Some jurisdictions where there was no design review, quickly saw a small forest of towers with antennas in the air," said Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth.

The new ordinance requires each provider to get design approval from the planning commission.

Commissioner Janice Fisher said they worked hard to get an ordinance "broad enough to handle any applicant that could come in."

To transmit the signals, the antennas must be located high enough to have a pathway clear of other buildings. Roseth emphasized that there are many creative ways to keep the actual antennas, which are about four feet long, out of view. "We believe that, in most cases, we'll be able to cover the city by locating the antennas on buildings.

The roofs of Pine Inn, Sunset Center and Carmel Plaza are all possible locations for the antennas, according to Roseth. The providers would have to negotiate with the owners of the buildings and rent the necessary roof space.

If providers find that buildings in town won't meet their needs and a tower is needed, then they will work with the city to set up a tower that fits in, Roseth said.

More than one provider will be able to set up an antenna on the same spot. While this method of "co-location" could simplify matters for the applicant and the city, there is one potential drawback: too many antennas on the same roof.

For now, the city isn't expecting a wave of applications. Roseth expects two or three will apply within the next year.

CHS Padres make splash at Central Coast swimming meet

By JERRY STEWART

THE MTAL champion Carmel High School Swim Team went to the Central Coast Section Meet last weekend in San Jose on a mission, and the results showed that a lot was accomplished.

"Our goal was to go to CCS and turn some heads, and we did that," said CHS diving coach Mike Massey.

It marked the first time that the boys and girls teams competed together in CCS competition.

The Padres finished the three-day meet with 67 overall points, landing them in 12th place out of nearly 40 competing schools.

On Thursday, the diving team led the charge by scoring the most points in that competition, earning 43 points.

The Padres were paced by strong performances from senior Matt Borek, who finished 2nd with a score of 375.55 and freshman phenom Sarah Little, who finished third.

Millan Diaz-Aguado (5th place) and Brian Mahoney (7th place) also contributed to the Padres' early diving success.

"I'm very proud of all of them," said Massey. "They worked hard and they stayed focused."

Friday, freshman Craig Gonzales placed seventh in the qualifying 100 backstroke with a time of 55.31, which makes him a consideration for the National All-American Team.

And during Saturday's 100 backstroke final Gonzales finished seventh with a time of 55.61 and moved up from 11th to 14th in the 200 individual medley finals.

According to CHS boys swimming coach Conrad Kohrs, Gonzales was the only freshman from any school who qualified for Saturday's backstroke finals.

"The CCS is one of the top swimming meets in the United States, and the kids really came together as a team," said Kohrs. "Scouts from colleges such as Stanford and UC Berkeley come to see prospects."

The 200 freestyle relay team, consisting of Elliot Byrd, Adam Struve, Blake Zealear and Gonzales placed 14th in the consolation finals with a time of 1:32.74.

And on the girls' side, Kirsten Wehde finished 11th in the consolation finals of the 100 backstroke with a time 1:00.60. Her time was three one-hundreds over the time needed for consideration for the National team.

"Just to make the consolation finals or finals is quite an accomplishment," said Kohrs. "It's our best finish since our 1995 fifth place finish and it's great because this team is young."

n Notes: 50 freestyle, boys: Elliot Byrd, 25th place, 22.90; 200 yards medley relay, boys, 32nd place; 400 freestyle medley, 22nd place, 3:29.03.

Stevenson boys golf team runner-up at Northern California championship

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

On the heels of their Central Coast Section championship, the Robert Louis Stevenson boys golf team placed second Monday at the Northern California Championships held at the par-72, 18-hole Contra Costa Country Club.

In individual stroke play, the Pirates' David Morgan was runner-up, losing by only four strokes.

While in team play, the Pirates were only one stroke off the pace, totaling 378.

"It was our best score ever at a Nor-Cal Championship," said coach John Powers. "The course was hard but it was also fair."

Erik Hebert led the team by shooting a 73, while David Addison carded a 75, Andy Hunter and Morgan 76 and Oliver Rosen 78.

"It was a very successful season," said Powers. "We had tremendous depth and five of our seven players will be back next year."

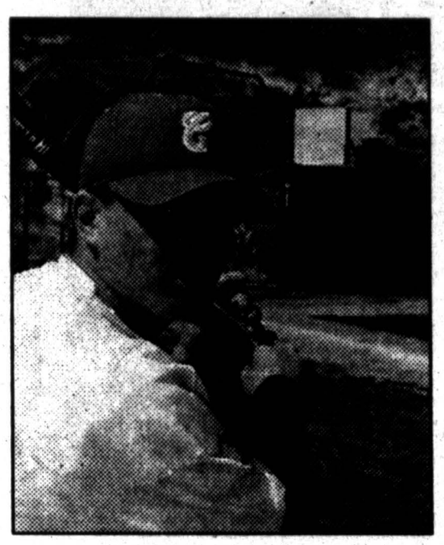
Star Carmel High catcher looking towards playoffs, future

By JERRY STEWART

IF YOU've ever been to a Padres baseball game at Carmel high School, you've probably noticed Al Stream.

Donning a fiery red Padres cap and jacket, the gray-bearded Stream tries to motivate the team with roars of support, such as "Lock and load!" and "C'mon, Scrappy dog."



Brian Stream, whose drive and heart overshadow his five-foot-five frame, leads the Padres into the CCS Playoffs

Although Stream is encouraging all of the Mission Trail Athletic League co-champion Padres, he's usually got his eyes on his favorite player, the catcher, who happens to be his son Brian.

Brian Stream, who's affectionately known as "Scrappy dog" because of his hustle, has been playing baseball since he was 8, and this is his second full season as the Padres starting catcher.

'He's the spark plug of the team. I think he's the best (catcher) in the league.'

— Mike Kelly.
Padres head coach

Last year, as a sophomore, Stream was named to the MTAL All-League Second Team, and this season he's continued his success, carrying an impressive .440 batting average and a high on-base percentage that leads to a potent offense.

"He's the spark plug of the team," said Padres head coach Mike Kelly. "He's a very good defensive catcher. I think he's the best player at that position in the league."

For Stream, whose drive and heart overshadow his five-foot-five frame, this is only the beginning.

"My goal is to get a scholarship and play Division One baseball," said Stream. "My top goal would be to play at Cal Berkeley or another northern California college such as Santa Clara or San Jose State."

For the last few years, Stream has been taking advantage of precious opportunities to make his dreams a reality.

PROFILE: Brian Stream

In 1995, at the age of 15, Stream was given the chance to be a bullpen catcher for the Salinas Peppers professional baseball team.

From that experience, Stream also built a strong kinship with Rich Aldrete, who was with the Peppers at that time.

Aldrete now is president and executive director of the Aldrete Baseball Academy.

According to Aldrete, Stream was instrumental in originating the academy.

"He'd come to baseball camps and would get lessons," said Aldrete. "Each year I take 4 to 5 kids who have drive and are positive on and off the field, and I try to teach them the game."

Stream said that as soon as the Padres season is over, he'll be back at the academy honing his skills.

"I'm going back to get more lessons from Rich," said Stream. "He's like my best friend."

If Stream does reach his goals, don't look for him behind the plate.

"I want to play second base or shortstop at the next level," Stream said. "I think there's a little more of a creativity and entertainment factor at those positions."

According to Aldrete, Stream's best attribute is that he's a student of the game.

"Brian is the epitome of what I teach. He knows the game," said Aldrete. "He's one of the best players in the area, and he'll open up some eyes at the next level just because of the way he plays the game."

But for now, Stream is focusing on the Padres' CCS playoff drive for a title.

And as usual, he can count on having the eyes of the elder Stream upon him.

"My parents are my most supportive fans, and that's because they've always supported me on and off the field."

Perhaps, in the next few years, it will indeed be a 'Scrappy dog's' life.

Editorial

Preservation isn't only for buildings

IN TODAY'S Real Estate section you'll find a long piece by Pine Cone publisher Kirstie Wilde about Carmel pioneers Frank and Jane Gallatin Powers — a piece we think is relevant to the debate over a new auditorium at Sunset Center.

Frank Powers was a lawyer and a real estate developer who, as a result of his activities here from 1904 to 1920, was largely responsible for Carmel's success as a seaside resort.

But his ambitions — and his wife's — had a much more profound impact on the character of Carmel as we know it today. Their dream was to create in Carmel a haven for artists and performers.

A 1906 San Francisco newspaper reported the Powers' success in a full-page article on the "Artists, Poets and Writers of Carmel-by-the-Sea." Another historian has stated that by 1910 there were 375 houses in Carmel, "60 percent built by citizens who are devoting their lives to work connected to the aesthetic arts."

Carmel's rich heritage of art, music and theater has continued through the years since 1910 and is something the city is rightfully proud of today. We think most Carmelites would agree that Carmel's essential character derives from its artistic traditions as much as from its scenic setting, wonderful climate, and charming buildings.

How does Carmel preserve its artistic heritage? Backers of the new Sunset auditorium argue that preservation, in this case, requires demolition of a building much beloved through its 60-year history, but which has such gross inadequacies that it cannot simply be "renovated."

The most compelling arguments in favor of a new auditorium are made by the performers who use the place. According to Sunset Center director Brian Donoghue, the vast majority of musicians, actors and dancers agree that the building is woefully inadequate. The deficiencies are so great that there has even been talk that some of the town's treasured events might pull out of Sunset Center if it isn't brought up to modern standards.

What deficiencies get the most complaints? The ones that would be practically impossible to resolve by remodeling the existing auditorium. For example, the stage isn't wide enough or deep enough for most contemporary productions — and there's hardly any wing space. And, the acoustics must be improved, which requires enlarging the arched opening between the stage and the audience. Neither step is practical without putting up a new building.

The new auditorium will have essentially the same seating capacity as the existing one, so there's no need to be concerned that a five-year run of Phantom of the Opera will take over the place. Small events suitable to Carmel will continue to be Sunset Center fare.

Not only will the new auditorium be the same size as the current one, it will be built in basically the same style. If the new auditorium could suddenly appear in place of the old one, some people walking by might not even notice the difference.

We think the arguments in favor of the new auditorium are overwhelming. We think the consensus reached at the city's political level (on final votes by the Cultural Commission, the Historic Preservation Committee, the planning commission and the city council there was a total of one "no" vote) speaks volumes about the merits of the new auditorium.

The decision has been made, and now the hard part — paying for the new building – takes center stage. We look forward to the day when the new auditorium is finished.

In praise of Tardivet

Dear Editor:

A standing ovation to Kirstie Wilde for telling a fair story regarding Mondo's Trattoria. I survived a decade of service at Hog's Breath Inn to join an extraordinary man's team in 1989. I loved Mr. Eastwood and Mr. Becker, but came to adore my new employer, Philippe Tardivet.

A Carmel Valley Village hole-in-the-wall was magically transformed by Mr. Tardivet into a gathering place where all came and were welcomed; there treated to a level of excellence and neighborliness unequaled anywhere. During the earthquake that year, Mr. Tardivet collected barbecues, lit candles, and gave away everything he could to a shaken village with no power. Three years later, a devastating fire extinguished the dream but could not stop the spirit. Mr. Tardivet made certain all his employees were tucked in safely with restaurant colleagues. Only then did he gather himself up to start all over again elsewhere.

A culinary genius, Mr. Tardivet takes service to its height. Anyone who's experienced Mondo's Trattoria has come away feeling treasured. He may invite himself to your table, but after all this is his home, not simply a place to grab a bite.

Carmel City Council and company has long abused selective rule enforcement and so-called politics to attempt control of anyone more colorful than themselves. Perhaps when their ten thousand dollars worth of new chairs are in place the council members will become more relaxed and not concentrate so thoroughly on pulling the rug out from under a quality business such as Mondo's Trattoria which represents Carmel elegantly.

ROBBERY

The suspects are two Hispanic males, one in his late 30s and the other in his late 20s, according to Carmel Police Lieutenant Bill Uretsky. Police believe that the men are part of a network of Colombian jewelry thieves preying on jewelry salespeople across America.

Police are not optimistic about catching the robbers. There are hundreds of people involved in the the Colombian ring, Uretsky said.

Police prediction

In recent months, several jewelry salespeople have felt thieves stalking them in Carmel. Each time, local police officers responded and the suspects either ran away or were brought in for questioning and released for lack of evidence. Carmel police knew it was just a matter of time before a robber struck, unless salespeople started taking more precautions.

An underground parking garage is one of the most dangerous places in town for a vulnerable person such as a jewelry salesman. "First contact the police if you're going to be in an underground parking garage by yourself," Uretsky warned.

He also encouraged citizens to call the police if they notice suspicious people loitering near a store or in a garage.

Sen. McPherson returns portion of office budget

STATE SEN. BRUCE McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, has announced that figures for 1996 reveal he returned nearly $44,000 of his allotted $240,000 office budget while he was still a member of the state Assembly.

He was elected to his 15th District State Senate office last November.

Each year as assemblyman, he returned portions of his office budget, according to McPherson legislative staff reports.

SEASON

quieted, the outlook improved for residents of Fern Canyon. Continued strong winds would have pushed the fire downhill, explained Ian Watts, a Carmel-by-the-Sea fireman who was dispatched to the scene.

But if one positive factor helped halt the blaze, others — particularly the dryness of the landscape and the heat— conspired to create the highly combustible conditions in the first place.

And Friday's fire could be just the start of a very dangerous summer, according to fire officials.

"Within the next month or so, if we continue to have warm weather, we will be in an extreme situation," said Carmel Fire Chief Bill Hill.

Factors that led to Friday's event included:

■ The driest three months on record.

Seventy-nine hundredths of an inch fell in all of February, March and April, according to the Monterey Station of the National Weather Service.

■ "Unseasonal high temperatures," to use White's term, were reported in the area.

Carmel Highlands was 88 degrees at 3:29 p.m. Friday, White said.

■ On the same day, relative humidity was a low 28 percent. Just days before, the Highlands had experienced cool temperatures and remarkably high humidity.

The significance of the dangerous conditions has not been lost on the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, which declared the start of fire season in Monterey County early this year — on May 12, just four days before the Highlands fire.

"What we have are very dry conditions in May and June that are like what we expect in September or August," Hill said.

White did not wish to overplay the dangers of the Highlands fire, noting that such dry heat and breezes are not the norm for the Carmel coast. "We must remember: This is Carmel, where you wear your coat in the summer.

Nevertheless, last week's blaze — which required the attention of more than 200 fire fighters from six agencies — was a close call. The blaze came within half-a-mile of the nearest home, located south of Corona.

Hill said Carmel's most dangerous zones are near dried-out green belts, such as Mission Trail Park and Pescadero Canyon and overgrown vacant lots, which threaten neighboring houses.

White stressed that the Highlands fire reminds us to expect the unexpected. "The unusual weather was an anomaly, but it was a wake-up call to be prepared."

White takes walk 'on the mild side' in Mayor's Choice Exhibit

By MARGO PETIT NICHOLS

IT ISN'T so much that Pepe Le Pew is great art, but Mayor Ken White chose a production cell of the passionate cartoon skunk attributed to Warner Brothers' artist Chuck Jones as one of the Mayor's Choice paintings from 30 Carmel galleries.

REVIEW

The works were displayed in the City Council Chambers over the weekend — as one of the favorite attractions in the Fourth Annual Carmel Art Festival.

Except for the skunk, the mayor's taste ran almost exclusively toward representational art, with depictions of gardens, seascapes, shorescapes, landscapes, and Carmel Mission Basilica.

In all, the mayor's picks, though sound, invited the viewer to take a walk on the mild side.

Also seen among White's selections were Carmel landmarks, such as the Tuck Box. "A Monterey Fishing Boat" by Robert Moesle looked so much like a photograph, we had to examine it eyeball to canvas to detect that it was a painting.

That one had a red "sold" dot in its lower corner, lending credence to the mayor's shrewd eye for a winner.

The Blue Dog's penetrating stare probably intimidated his honor into selecting Rodrigue's red, white and blue "Stars and Stripes" number, and Corinne Whitaker's digital dye print on canvas enigmatically entitled "Woman, Type A", obviously was the mayor's token abstract.

All in all, the choices were conservative, diplomatic, sentimental, charming and nostalgic — Pepe Le Pew notwithstanding, of course.

Oh, those crazy, darn folks from Philly

FORMER Pebble Beach residents Michael and Marie Kendall, now of Philadelphia, are about to retire and want to build a house near a small town on the spectacular coast of Maine.

They had plans drawn up by a Philadelphia architect and took them to a fellow named Tom in the small Maine town. His business cards identified him as "Carpenter, Builder, Lobsterman."

"CAN you build this for us?" asked Michael, handing him the set of plans.

Tom studied them at length, giving the Kendalls a tiny burst of confidence that he knew what he was doing.

AFTER almost 15 minutes of complete silence, however, Tom kind of tsk-tsked and uh-ohed, then spoke in the somber tones of an undertaker:

"Sorry to tell you, folks, but you've been had. These plans must have been done by a crazy man or a durn fool, but I'll draw up some new ones for you, if you like."

"LOOK," said Michael, very annoyed, "these plans were drawn by one of the finest architectural firms in Philadelphia. They're exactly how we want the house done. Now will you build it or not?"

Tom looked startled, but then said warmly:

"WELL, sure I will, if that's what you want — but I feel it's my duty as a professional to warn you that if we use these here plans, you folks are going to wind up with a house with TWO bathrooms!"

Clunk.

P.S. — The Kendalls explained to Tom that they both had weak kidneys and would definitely need two bathrooms. Old Tom understood and is now in the process of building the house!

"He's good, too!" Michael reports.

"How did the people of the Monterey Peninsula ever allow their resounding vote AGAINST a new dam to be VETOED by a for-profit water company with absentee ownership which blithely dictates that WE, not the company stockholders, must pay for it — and oh, by the way, your water rates will be doubled!

"HOW come the company's stockholders get a free ride on this?

"And since utility monopolies are being phased out all over the country — telephone, electricity, gas, etc. — when do we get an alternative to Cal-Am?"

Good grief, Houston, take a breath. We have no

■ CALIFORNIA PUBLIC SCHOOL LIBRARIES:

Least-funded in the nation

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS
Associate Arts Editor

IN A so-called affluent, literate community like Carmel, it might be assumed that children enjoy exceptional educational resources.

Think again.

In the Carmel Unified School District (CUSD), the total amount spent per pupil, per year for library materials is $4.25. California public schools rank lowest in the nation in terms of library materials spending.

Couple this statistic with a fact conveyed by Donna Bessant, director of Instructional Materials and School Libraries for the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District (MPUSD).

"California," she relates, is "the absolute worst, by a huge margin," for the number of librarians per student. "In California, there is one school librarian for every 6,200 children," Bessant says. "The next worst state has one librarian for every 3,300."

What has come to light, in interviewing school district personnel, members of the California School Library Association, and the school library consultant for the California Department of Education, is that Pine Cone readers who choose to can be activist in requesting that a library funding assembly bill — which comes up for review next Wednesday — be accepted as it was passed by the Assembly last month.

Assembly Bill 862 passed by a vote of 19-0 on April 14 and was referred to the Appropriations Committee. It requires an appropriation of $28 million in order that public school libraries receive $5 per year per student for library materials for California's 5,467,224 pupils.

On May 8, the Appropriations Committee put it in the suspense file where any bill goes that requires an appropriation of $150,000 or more, or has fiscal implications of $150,000 or more. The Budget Sub-Committee of the Assembly Education Finance Committee will be reviewing the suspense file in five days.

Sandy Schuckett, vice president for legislation of the California School Library Association, and a political activist, urges citizens to contact the appropriate committee members or their assembly member before May 28 to urge support for public school libraries.

'Man on the moon' obsolescence

Schuckett says many school library shelves hold obsolete "man will someday go to the moon" books that must be replaced with current information.

Barbara Jeffus, School Library Consultant for the California Department of Education, told

AB 862 to be reviewed next Wednesday

INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS AB 862 (Ducheny) would create the Library Materials Fund (LMF). The bill requires the Superintendent of Public Instruction (SPI) to annually apportion $5 per unit of average daily attendance reported from the prior fiscal year to each school district and each county office of education for the purchase of library materials.

These materials may include, but are not limited to, books, reference materials, periodicals, laser discs, maps, charts, globes, materials in an electronic format, and other media. The bill passed by a vote of 19-0.

This bill is coming out of the suspense file of the Appropriations Committee next Wednesday, to be reviewed by the Legislative Budget Sub-Committee of the State Assembly Education Finance Committee.

Readers who support this appropriation may write (before Wednesday's deadline): State Assembly member Fred Keeley, State Capitol, Room 4139, Sacramento 95814, or call (916) 445-8496; or Assembly member Denise Ducheny, vice chairman, Legislative Budget Committee, California State Assembly, State Capitol, Room 6026, Sacramento 95814, or call (916) 445-7556.

'FOREVER PLAID' BOWS AT CIRCLE THEATRE OF THE GOLDEN BOUGH

HUMOR, NOSTALGIA and a measure of goofiness blend harmoniously in "Forever Plaid," the first production of the summer season at Pacific Repertory Theatre.

Terry Barto directs and choreographs "Forever Plaid," which tells of the "would-be famous singing group, The Four Plaids." It's February 1964, and, as luck would have it, the boys — on their way to pick up their matching plaid tuxedos — collide with a bus load of Catholic schoolgirls on their way to see the Beatles on "The Ed Sullivan Show." Thirty years later, thanks to a hole in the ozone layer, the heavenly quartet gets to perform the show they never gave. Songs of the 1950s are brought to life, from "Day-O" to "Three Coins in the Fountain."

A half-price preview of "Forever Plaid" will be staged at 7:30 tonight at the Circle Theater of the Golden Bough, on Casanova between Eighth and Ninth, Carmel.

The musical will formally open at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, and shows continue at 2 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 29.

Nichols named associate arts editor

A CARMEL WRITER with a flair for mystery and solid journalistic credentials joins the Carmel Pine Cone staff in a newly created post: associate arts editor.

Margot Petit Nichols will assist Arts and Entertainment Editor Anne Papineau in covering arts issues within the Pine Cone circulation area.

Nichols has garnered numerous bylines in The Pine Cone since January 1996. She reviews books and has accepted feature article assignments on subjects ranging from senior poets of the Monterey Peninsula to the funding of California school libraries in this week's Pine Cone. Beginning this week, Nichols will tackle arts and entertainment issues on a regular basis.

Nichols attended the University of San Francisco on full scholarship and earned a bachelor's degree in English literature and Thomistic philosophy. She lived abroad for 13 years. Nichols taught English in both San Francisco and Germany and served as promotion director for the Overseas Service Corp. in Frankfurt, Germany and Venice, Italy.

Her career has taken her to editing posts in London, New York and San Francisco, and she was editor of both The California Herald and Claremont Press in Oakland. Nichols served as a reporter for the Oakland Tribune. She also established and managed her own advertising agency in St. Helena, Napa Valley, for 14 years, specializing in the wine industry.

She is a member of Mystery Writers of America, Society of Children's Book Writers, Sisters in Crime and the Hubris Poetry Circle.

Nichols has one daughter, Francesca Valentina Venezia, who resides in Carmel-by-the-Sea and manages The Secret Garden; as well as three stepchildren in California, Oregon and Idaho.

A published poet, she is currently writing a series of young adult mystery novels. She is also a freelance editor for other authors.

"I have been a writer and a poet since I could write before entering school, and it has never occurred to me to do anything else," she asserts. "My most profound wish is to launch the young adult mystery series with a good publisher, and to publish a book of poetry sometime in the next 10 years."

LIBRARIES...

The Pine Cone, "California school kids have been shortchanged with library resources, and I've seen the difference.

"Research shows that there is a strong link to literacy and school libraries. Strong, well-staffed libraries with current materials are an essential ingredient to stronger SAT scores and to information literacy. The ability to find information and to question its validity are transferable skills children must have as adults to survive in this age of information, and libraries are the most cost-effect way to provide a variety of these resources," Jeffus maintains.

Of the $4.25 the Carmel Unified School District spends per student annually for library materials, $2 comes from the school district's general fund, plus an amount each school principal can allocate for library program needs. There are no set site budgets for this, according to Judy Long, CUSD business director, which accounts for Carmel High's library materials fund for its 720 students coming in at a little less than $7 per student per year.

Parent groups are proving a vital source of supplemental funds for library book and technology acquisitions and other library needs.

Long says, "Carmel parent groups are extraordinary. They are fabulously supportive in many ways and in their donations to our libraries."

No state money

Bessant points out that there is no state money dedicated to the purchase of library books and materials. She buys books and materials out of the MPUSD funds, which run about $4 per year per student in each of that district's 14 elementary schools. A federal grant gives her an additional $3.15 per year per student. More monies come from book fairs and PTAs for a total of about $10 per year per elementary student.

MPUSD's four middle schools and three high schools have librarians who act as departments and are thus able to negotiate with other departments for general funding.

"These 21 schools — with a combined enrollment of 12,000 students — have 20 librarians, almost one certificated library teacher for each of our schools," Bessant says.

Another hair-raising statistic

Bessant mentioned another hair-raising statistic that places California at the bottom of the nation in its student/librarian ratio.

Because there are 2,425 students in the CUSD, the ratio of certificated librarians to school population is well above the state's, but less than MPUSD's one librarian for every 571 students.

Within the CUSD, there is one certificated librarian, John Archer, library media teacher at Carmel High. He has one part-time assistant, Linda Carr, who qualifies as a para professional librarian.

Carmel's Middle School and the two larger elementary schools (Tularcitos and Carmel River) have full-time classified librarians and part-time classified assistants.

Archer concurs with Monterey's Bessant that new books average about $16 each, but "because of our need for technology, it's hard to replace titles or just plain buy new books. Our students are conscientious about returning books — so our loss rate is probably 1 or 2 percent per year. Obsolescence takes a toll, though."

Bessant says Monterey loses from 4 to 10 percent of its books to non-returns, damage and obsolescence.

Encyclopedias on network

CDs for computers can run from $40 to many hundreds. Encyclopedias for one station cost more than $100, but on network, Archer says, a World Book Encyclopedia can run $1,300.

"We have a great Scribner's Writers Series, which is biographical in content; it runs $400 on CD-ROM and is limited to one user at a time. In paper, the series would cost $1,200 per set."

Maintaining technologies is costly, also. A technician runs $75 per hour to correct software problems.

"Just keeping the Internet up is a pricey thing," Archer says.

Libraries spiraled into decline

Some years ago, when the federal government had money for education and school libraries, California didn't mandate monies for libraries. Because of this and Prop. 13, "which sent California school libraries spiraling into decline," according to David Loertscher — professor in the School of Library and Information Science at San Jose State University — school library budgets have suffered.

Some good news

However, amid all the bad news, some good has just emerged: Each of five school libraries in the CUSD soon will be receiving a check for $4,792 as a result of Californians having checked off the California School Library Protection Fund square in Step 10 (Contributions) on their state tax returns.

Archer says that it took the California School Library Association a long time to get the fund onto the state tax forms; and to keep it on in the future, a minimum amount of $250,000 is required to be donated by taxpayers. Donations exceeded that amount by $100,000, and The Department of Education kicked in $500,000. Because there is, at the moment, extra money in the state coffers, the legislature has augmented the fund, bringing the California School Library Protection Fund established this year to $12 million.

A portion of this fund is used to process applications from individual schools. Writing grant applications was a time-consuming and demanding task, according to Archer. Every school hoping to benefit from the newly established fund was required to conceive and write a three page, five-year Library Improvement Plan.

Checks are in the mail

The checks currently in the mail to five CUSD schools are the result of each having submitted successfully just such a five-year plan. The schools are Carmel High, Carmel Middle, Tularcitos Elementary, Carmel River and Captain Cooper in Big Sur, a K through 5 school which, with fewer than 100 students, is a big winner.

The Contributions check-off for this fund remains on the state tax forms for five years. Barbara Jeffus says the schools which have received funds for collection development during the first and second cycle of applications may not apply again until every school in California that has

KAZU will survive the fire and come back stronger

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

PACIFIC GROVE public radio station KAZU (90.3 FM) historically has been propelled by a dedicated staff of volunteers and contributors. On-air personalities that we have come to know and rely on for our alternative source of music ... be it folk, jazz, gospel, classical or Grateful Dead... these are the people who made KAZU the beloved radio station cherished by a wide array of listeners. In the aftermath of the fire of Wednesday, May 7th (a blaze that caused in excess of $300,000 in damage), these very same people have rallied to do whatever is necessary to ensure the survival of KAZU, affectionately known to many as "kazoo."

Some salient points . . . some contrary to what certain San Francisco Bay stations would have you believe. KAZU will resume broadcasting . . . perhaps within a month. Insurance will cover a great deal of the damage. However, money and public support are still needed. A new location has been secured on Central Avenue in Pacific Grove, next to the Granary Market. Funding is required to make the move and to cover expenses not covered by insurance. Rare record collections were lost in the fire and already certain people have stepped forward with offers of their own collections. Numerous fund raisers are in the works. One will feature food, wine and a silent auction, to take place 6 to 9 p.m. June 10 at Montrio restaurant. Tickets are $75. Call 644-2427 or 648-8880.

Broadcasting for close to two decades (a 20th anniversary celebration is scheduled for the fall), KAZU will survive the fire and come back stronger. A great deal of music that people want to hear simply cannot be heard on mainstream radio. Simply put, without KAZU there is a void. Tax-deductible contributions can be made to the KAZU rebuilding fund and sent to Box KAZU, Pacific Grove, CA 93950.

Thackery close to home

For the benefit of blues lovers, Doc's Nightclub on Cannery Row will feature guitarist Jimmy Thackery on Saturday. The guitarist for the seminal roots rock band the Nighthawks for more than 14 years, Thackery is a charismatic guitar monster who is forever drawing the inevitable comparisons to the late great guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughn. Says Downbeat Magazine, ". . . easily one of the best white blues guitarists alive today." Playing with a stripped-down trio Thackery, with his trademark Stratocaster, is in the words of Blues Review, "a thunderstorm of passion and fury that just crackles and roars with conviction and power." Touring in support of his latest Blind Pig release, Drive to Survive, Thackery is as adept on slide guitar and moves effortlessly through a wide array of styles. Music starts at 9:30 p.m. and there is no cover charge.

Philip DeGruy plays the Henry Miller Library

More guitar virtuosity will be on display at the Henry Miller Library in Big Sur on Saturday at 6 p.m. Performing down the coast amidst the redwood trees on Saturday will be New Orleans guitarist Philip DeGruy. A show stopper at last year's Big Sur Jazz Festival, DeGruy (pronounced degree) is a legend amongst fellow guitarists. Playing a self-designed "guitarp" DeGruy is a protege of guitarist Lenny Breau. DeGruy's instrument is a seven-string guitar with 10 additional tunable harp strings. According to Linda Sonrisa of the Henry Miller Library, DeGruy will be playing a new guitarp, especially designed for him, at Saturday's evening show. Said Danny Gatton about DeGruy in Guitar Magazine, "I have never been more impressed by anybody's playing, ever. Phillip DeGruy is going to make a lot of serious guitarists want to throw their guitars in the trash." A $6 donation will be requested at Saturday's performance. Call 667-2574 for more information.

Rock & Art Festival revisited

Despite the absence of major sponsorship and/or major headliners, the Rock & Art Festival was a qualified success. Although crowds were sparse (an estimated 1,500 paid were joined by 500 musicians and other comps) rock 'n' roll had its day (or weekend) in Monterey. Sixty-plus bands (including more than 20 local) performed on four stages without a hitch and the vibe was collectively serene.

Rock 'n' roll musicians in Monterey County have very few venues but thanks to the folks at three spirits productions all this seems to be changing. According to Monterey County Fairground's Event Coordinator Sue Houser, the festival will return next year and " . . . will become a Mother's Day tradition." As Houser sees it, people are always talking about the need for younger people to have something to do . . . this festival is a step in correcting that problem.

Sound bytes

A celebration for "Papa" Jake Stock has been scheduled for Sunday, June 1 at the Garden Stage at the Monterey County Fairgrounds from noon to 4 p.m. All musicians are welcomed to perform. Jake's longtime group, the Abalone Stompers, will get the "celebration" rolling. The event is free and open to the public. A scholarship in Jake's name has been founded to send youths to summer music camps. Contributions can be mailed to Jackson Stock at 205 John St., Monterey 93940.

Sad to say that Morgan Christopher of Morgan's Coffee & Tea, located in downtown Monterey, has put live music on hold for the time being . . . a sad reminder of the difficult nature of promoting live music.

Cookbook mavens: Savor some of these

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

THE PILE OF LATEST cookbook releases is threatening to push me out of my office. Here's a sampling for your pleasure, and my need for order.

Standing quite alone for serious cookbook collectors is the posthumous publication of culinary icon Pierre Franey's last book:

Pierre Franey Cooks with His Friends, Pierre Franey & Claudia Franey Jensen, Artisan 1997, hardcover, 224 pages, $30.

Included in this beautifully illustrated salute to haute cuisine are 25 recipes from world class chef/friends of Franey; Paola Cavazzini, Michel Guérard, Paul Bocuse, Frédy Girardet and more. The recipes are never long or complicated yet they share Franey's signature mastery of balance and seasoning.

A Simple Celebration, Gina Bell Bragg & David Simon, Harmony Books 1997, hardcover, 224 pages, $23.

According to Deepak Chopra who wrote the introduction to this fine vegetarian cookbook by a local author, "...the body is condensed consciousness." The book presents an elevation of that consciousness through inspirational text and the practical application of some 140 simple to make, flavorful recipes. A particular favorite of mine is the Warm Wild Rice Salad (see recipe at right).

All American Waves of Grain, Barbara Grunes & Virginia Van Vynckt, Henry Holt & Co. 1997, Hardcover, 314 pages, $25.

Subtitled, "How to buy, store and cook every imaginable grain," that about says it. Interesting are the origin essays on many of the newer (to most of us) specialty grains; amaranth, quinoa, spelt, kamut, triticale, teff etc.

The Fat Free Living Super Cookbook, Jyl Steinback, Warner Books 1997, spiral softcover, 444 pages, $16.99.

The fifth in this series of best sellers, all recipes report in at less than one gram of fat per serving. Sometimes this seems magical but let's take Cinnamon, Honey Sweet Potatoes — the flavoring comes from cinnamon, ginger, orange juice and honey — 122 calories and NO fat. Of course there are a plethora of recipes that use fat-free dairy products. Filled with ideas on a "getting beaten to death diet subject," but you'll learn a few new tricks.

Heart-Healthy Cooking for All Seasons, Dr. Marvin Moser, Simon & Schuster Pocket Books, 1996, 237 pages, $15.

Cardiologist Moser has happened upon a happy collaboration with three of America's most prestigious chefs, Larry Forgione, Jimmy Schmidt and Alice Waters. The introductory material to each superb recipe is lively and the principle of "enjoyment" of healthy eating is underlined. Sparse graphic material though, I would have liked to SEE some of the dishes.

Cooking for Healthy Living, Kathleen Devanna Fish, Bon Vivant Press 1996, softcover, 224 pages, 165 recipes, $15.95.

Another winner from Bon Vivant, featuring health conscious recipes from 41 of the nation's most celebrated chefs. Fish with her publisher seems to have the knack of recipe choice and then simplification down to a science. I made the Gingered Tuna Tartare (going light on the jalapeno) and followed it with the Hickory Roasted Sea Bass. The method of smoking the fish in the pan is a revelation and may put all of the Weber smokers on closeout sale!

The Chicken Parts Cookbook, Charles Pierce, Crown Trade Paperbacks 1997, 232 pages, $14.95.

I love the cover blurb "The best part of the chicken is the part that's on sale!" While I'm not in total agreement (we're a dark meat house), this is a great little tome for those of us who've run out of ways to prepare whatever our favorite part may be. How about Drumettes with Honey and Peanuts or Pan-fried Thighs with Apple Butter?

The Fat-Free Junk Food Cookbook, J. Kevin Wolfe, Crown Paperbacks, 143 pages, 100 recipes, $11.

I'm including this little book because its author is well-intentioned and the recipes are easy and fun. This is a book that teenagers would appreciate.

Ladyfingers & Nun's Tummies, Martha Barnette, Times Books 1997, hardcover, 213 pages, $20.

This small jewel should delight those of you who love food, history and etymology (deipnosophist? — I can't even break it down into Latin components!) I wallowed around in it like a bad kid in a mud puddle. It's THE book to give to your favorite kitchen maven.

A New England Fish Tale, Martha Watson Murphy, Henry Holt 1997, hardcover, 235 pages, $25.

This is really more a cookbook than reader although Murphy seasons the pages with old black and white photos of fishing vessels and references to the fisherman's life (her husband is a commercial fisherman). Two recipes which particularly suit us on the Peninsula are the Angel Hair Pasta with Smoked Salmon Carbonara, and the Squid and Spinach Pizza topped with tomato sauce, anchovy paste, garlic, spinach, fresh basil, squid, red bell pepper slices, Feta and Parmesan cheese (a combination I really like), and a small amount of olive oil.

Feature of the Week:

Cafe Gringo

At Café Gringo, they don't claim their Mexican cuisine to be strictly traditional, just fabulous. Co-owners David Dimler and Zenda Willemstein, formerly of the staff of Piatti, use a palette of Mexican ingredients as a springboard to sensational new tastes.

The restaurant, located on San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh in downtown Carmel, is open daily for lunch and dinner. Dine indoors or out on the heated patio. Your meal might begin with fresh juice, lemonade or mango-lime perhaps. Or savor a fresh fruit margarita, made with mango, peach or strawberry.

Continue on to enjoy housemade tamales, salmon cake appetizer or quesadilla with artichokes and sun dried tomatoes, marinated flank steak or even a "Mexican" Caesar salad.

The menu is extensive and ever-evolving. Wines may be ordered by the glass, and some 18 beers are also served.

Café Gringo is even "canine friendly:" beverages and light snacks are offered to waiting pets on the patio.

LIBRARY FUNDING...

applied has had a chance at the funds. During this second cycle, 2,500 schools applied. There are 7,872 California public schools in 999 school districts.

Jeffus says the number one benefit of the funding is that it has focused on school libraries in a way that hasn't happened in many years.

Backing up this statement is a recent article by librarian Nancy Rowells in the "California School Library Association Journal" — of which CHS's Archer is editor — which says, "Libraries are benefiting from the energy and commitment that went into preparing (the grant applications) and this 'seed money' of these allocations can be the impetus that starts the library improvement process in schools."

Archer, too, says the funding "is good news. Perhaps the tide is being turned . . . perhaps we are approaching at least a neutral area in regard to California school libraries' standing in the country for funding."

Consistent budget needed

Jeffus is also optimistic, but points out that a one-time grant of less than $5,000 helps, but doesn't fix the problem.

"Librarians need a consistent amount they can count on in order to plan ahead," she says. To put library funding in perspective, Jeffus points out, we have to compare California to national school library funding to see just how California placed 50th in the nation.

Statistics for 1995 show that the average budget for books nationwide is $15 to $18 per student. In California the average budget is $3.66 per student.

Both Jeffus and Schuckett say that parents and other concerned citizens who would like to see an annual $5 per student per year for the purchase of library materials can make a difference if they write to the State Assembly before Bill 862 is reviewed next Wednesday by the budget subcommittee of the Assembly Education Finance Committee.

Jeffus says, "They really do weigh the mail."

The bottom line is, according to a recent study, "where Library Media Centers are better funded, academic achievement is higher, whether their schools and communities are rich or poor, and whether adults in the community are well or poorly educated."

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

Carlson Gallery

The husband and wife team of David and Jeanne Carlson has sold fine art to museums and major collectors for 25 years. In January they opened the Carlson Gallery in Carmel. Starting this weekend, the gallery will conduct its official grand opening sale, with prices reduced 50 percent.

Among the fine works now showing is an original oil on canvas by Eugenio Zampighi, painted circa 1885. The subject is "Family Gathering." According to David Carlson, this is one of Zampighi's finest works extant.

Carlson Gallery also gathers museum-quality antiques and American and European paintings.

The gallery is easy to find: it's located on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth, beneath La Dolce Vita restaurant in downtown Carmel. Hours are noon to 6:30 p.m. Thursday through Monday. To learn more, call 625-1412.

Scudder Roofing

An Old World level of craftsmanship is maintained by the team at Scudder Roofing. This company's work can be viewed all around Carmel, from Sunset Center to the roofs of many of those "Hansel and Gretel" cottages that are a part of our heritage.

Pete Scudder, owner, is president of the Monterey Peninsula Roofing Association. He and his team are able to tackle roofing assignments of all types, both commercial and residential. The company employs shinglers who are still able to produce the custom, rolled shingle type of roof.

Scudder Roofing serves the tri-county area, and is based in Marina. Its focus is Monterey County.

To secure the services of these craftspeople, call 373-7212.

CareProviders, Victorian Home Care, Inc.

Offering individuals in-home care as needed, from two hours a day to around-the-clock, is the mission of CareProviders, Victorian Home Care, Inc.

Meg Parker Conners, R.N., is the owner/administrator of this private duty agency, based in Monterey, which serves all of Monterey County.

CareProviders sends personal care attendants into the home, to assist clients with bathing, dressing, meal preparation, shopping, assistance with medication and transportation.

As Conners explains, a registered nurse is on call to assist clients 24 hours a day. Each client, whether their needs are few or many, is assigned a community coordinator who oversees care. The coordinator ensures that all is going well, and helps integrate clients with community services that will enrich their life.

To learn of the full range of services supplied by CareProviders, Victorian Home Care, Inc., call 655-1935.

Teeleet

Discover why collectors from points north and south are making the trip to the Monterey Peninsula to view the showrooms of Teeleet Antiques. Located 12.5 miles east of Carmel in picturesque Carmel Valley Village, Teeleet is world-class in its inventory of rare pieces.

Mark and Dorothy Enayati operate this resource for everything from centuries-old vases to Persian rugs. Armoires are shown in a collection of 60 to 70. The shop even maintains a 1,000 volume lending library, used by the community at no charge.

Teeleet Antiques is worth seeing for the grounds alone. Old World craftsmen fashioned the Greek amphoras, stone troughs and doorways and other architectural highlights.

Teeleet Antiques is located at 25 Pilot Road and is open Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and other days by appointment. Call 625-2134.

answers to your questions, and, obviously, neither do any of our elected officials.

But Cal-Am is a sensitive bunch, and let us not steam them to the point where they pack up our water in their old kit bag and sashay on back to where they came from!

(Always the peacemaker, that's our role.)

BY THE WAY, besides the dam, isn't Cal-Am also planning to bill its customers for a filtration plant? How much above double will THAT raise our rates?

Details, details, we worry about the details.

AS most know, this column has a firm, unequivocal policy against lawyer jokes. We don't want them, and we don't run them.

As a disgraceful example of what we're talking about, the following was received from one Truman Ashton of Monterey last week:

"WE were visiting the cemetery in Colma near San Francisco when we saw a tombstone that read — 'Here lies John Brown, a lawyer and an honest man.'

"Have you ever heard of burying three people in one grave before?"

THIS is the sort of blasphemous lawyer joke that will never see print in this column. Don't even try! And as for you, Ashton, you're grounded.

THINKING BIG IN LETTUCE LAND . . . Chambers of commerce, by their very nature, are eternal optimists.

They are the original "spin doctors," the rose-colored glasses folks who see every sow's ear in their jurisdiction as a silk purse.

IT is not surprising then, that the Salinas Valley Chamber of Commerce wants to launch a big campaign to attract "more tourists." (Or perhaps more accurately, "some tourists.")

But how do chambers pay for big, big campaigns — assess their members? You crazy?

THEY ask the Salinas City Council to GIVE them a $40,000 windfall, silly.

"But," asks Salinas non-chamber-member Denise Sanchez, "what are we going to tell tourists to do if we should actually convince some to come here for a vacation?

"IF they're Steinbeck buffs — and I'm not sure how many of those there are — we can send them over to the Steinbeck museum for a half-hour or so, but then what?

"Show them lettuce growing? A cow or two? Some of our most popular drive-by shooting sites? Or maybe Wal Mart and Kmart?

"HONESTLY, I just think tourists would be furious if they got conned into coming here on vacation! Why should we try to be something we're not — like a vacation paradise?"

Now just a darn minute, Denise, you're overlooking Salinas's big drawing cards!

THE TOWN has BOTH McDonald's and Burger King, it has indoor bowling, and it has Rotten Robbie's cheap gas!

I could go on and on, but that should be enough to convince you that tourists will absolutely FLOCK in, once the word gets around! Stand back or you may be trampled in the rush!

SAN FRANCISCO, Paris, New York and Las Vegas will be begging for mercy once Salinas turns on its intoxicating charm that captivates all who come under its spell!

P.S. — The ever-romantic Monterey County Bland, which has the hots (big time) for ANY prospective advertiser or subscriber in Salinas, gushed editorially:

"Salinas and the rest of Salinas Valley have a lot going for them in terms of tourism."

BUT like Denise, the Bland couldn't think of any to mention!

(Think harder, Lilith! You, too, Roy Biggins!)

LASTLY . . . A thought for your weekend from 11-year-old Carmel Valley newcomer Jennifer Forest:

"Hear about the family who couldn't afford to pay the exorcist's fee?

"THEIR house was promptly repossessed!"

(By the way, we're extending the ban on lawyer jokes to include jokes by children, too.)

A merry chase up mountain tops and down in the Valley

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

MY HUSBAND and I just returned from a vacation that took us over more than 10 mountain tops, ranging from 6,000 to 10,000 feet. When you're alone and enveloped by the fierce beauty of nature, the spiritual rewards are vast.

Called "The Lonesomest Road in The World," Nevada's Highway 50 approximates the old Pony Express Trail. In the 1800s, riders coming from St. Joseph, Missouri, each rode 90 miles across desert, mountains and through forests, to deliver the mail to Sacramento within 10 days. They had 15 seconds to change horses every 30 miles, and the ads read that they had to be "22-26 years old, in good health and preferably orphans." The last phrase was included because of the hostile bands of Native Americans sometimes encountered as they rode the trail. Salary was $25 a week. Of course, at the end of the century, when the telegraph took over, the Pony Express became obsolete. Kit Carson was one of the riders, as were many other famous cowboys of the old west.

■ Professional Women's Network bestows scholarships

Back home in our west, I met a lady to be reckoned with. Petite Evelyn Ray-Reese, president of the Professional Women's Network (PWN) and the owner of Monterey Radio Station 103.9 KISS-FM, is a dynamic leader and speaker. At PWN's May 14 spring mixer in the Barnyard Community Room, Reese announced in a clear voice, "Our new motto this year is— 'PWN means business!'"

Reese then introduced chairpersons of the newspaper, programs, fundraisers, public relations and the various officers of PWN, as well as its originator, Grace Darcy.

Agneta Levberg, chair of the scholarship committee, described the PWN support system for working women and women in transition.

Scholarships of $1,000 were then awarded to Karen Gillingham and Shoshanna Rene, both of whom brought their children with them. Telling gripping stories of fighting hunger and financial need while they attended college, worked and cared for their children, they received thunderous applause as they thanked the members for helping them.

PWN membership has grown to 150. They meet once a month in Carmel. Call 646-0796 for additional information about this fine group.

Agneta Levberg, chair of the Professional Women's Network scholarship committee, laughs with recipients Shoshonna Rene and Karen Gillingham and PWN President Evelyn Ray-Reese at the spring mixer presented May 14 in the Barnyard community room.

■ Dogs dazzle at Del Monte Kennel Club competition

When I arrived at this classy show, which, in my opinion, is greater than the Westminster competition in New York, the early judging was taking place. Cool, rolling fog coming in from Stillwater Cove at Pebble Beach last Saturday touched all of us at the 18th hole like a blessing because everywhere else the temperature was 90 degrees.

Spectators lined the stairway leading up to the Lodge, where they had an overall view of canopied tents in the preparation areas, where owners were grooming their dogs. More than 650 short, tall, male and female canines were being readied to "strut their stuff," and many of them were champions from other shows. Some were called "novices," meaning that they had to receive "points" to move to higher levels of competition.

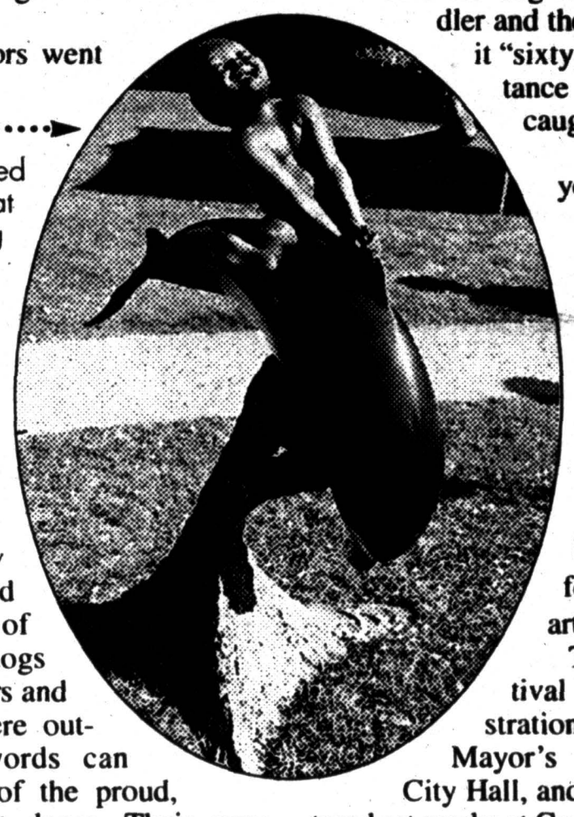
Although top honors went to Awesome Blossom, a terrier owned by actor Bill Cosby and Jean Heath of Pleasanton, exotic dogs like the Tibetan terriers and Chinese shar-peis were outstanding, but no words can describe the beauty of the proud, elegant looking great danes. Their very aloofness made you feel that they knew they were champions. Just gorgeous!

Of course, Danny Hoag showing his border collies herding sheep into a corral was one of the main attractions; and again, after watching the sheep obeying the dog with alacrity, our arms were covered with goose pimples. What a show! A few bystanders told me that the herding instinct is inborn in border collies.

Patricia Craige signed her book "Born to Win," and some of the proceeds from the sales were donated to the Monterey County SPCA.

The outstanding element of this magnificent show is the teamwork between handlers and their dogs. When you view the care the dog receives from the handler and then watch the dog give it "sixty seconds worth of distance run," your heart gets caught in your throat.

Can't wait for next year!



Of the several sculptured pieces on display at Devendorf Park during the Carmel Art Festival was Bud Bottom's 'Joy.' The boy on a leaping porpoise was just one of many entries from New Masters Gallery.

■ Carmel Art Festival proves colorful

The sponsors of the Carmel Art Festival last weekend successfully planned four days of incredible fine arts events featuring dozens of artists.

The fourth annual festival included art demonstrations, open galleries, a Mayor's Choice collection at City Hall, and a gathering of sculptured art works at Carmel's Devendorf Park where there was also a chili feed put on by the Carmel Residents Association.

A Carmel Youth Art Show, honoring the artistic achievement of Carmel students from kindergarten to high school, was on display at the Carmel Youth Center, and, of course, this year introduced the "1997 Art

■ Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Council serves big barbecue

"We're not negotiators," he said,"and we don't take prisoners." Then he smiled, saying,"But, we do have professional negotiators with whom we work." The speaker was Jerry Teeter, a SWAT team member of SAFE — Special Actions for Emergencies — one of several specialized volunteer organizations that comprise the Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Council.

Last Sunday the Advisory Council held its first major fundraiser, a barbecue, silent and live auction, at the Trail and Saddle Club in Carmel Valley. Some 400 volunteers work with the sheriffs. Members of the many specialized groups demonstrated their talents.

Promoters of the Monterey County Sheriff Advisory Council Annual Fundraising Barbecue pose with caterer Joe Solis (left). They include County Sheriff Norm Hicks, Advisory Council President Marti Haskell, Emcee Alan Richmond and Dave Allard.

The Correctional Emergency Response Team (CERT) exhibited illegal weapons made by inmates of local jails. Some were knives made from plastic combs and mattress springs and razors melted into the end of toothbrushes.

Search and Rescue brought "Vicky," a German shepherd "wilderness search dog." When Vicky finds a stranded human, she removes a strip of leather from her collar, places it in her mouth (Yes, I saw her do it) and runs back to home base to alert the S&R personnel who then follow her to the victim.

Miraculous? You bet! Other K-9s were trained to protect sheriffs. As the sheriff tried to handcuff a suspect, the suspect turned to fight him off, and the dog attacked the suspect ferociously. Dogs were also shown searching for marijuana and cocaine. They can sniff out less than one gram, which is a tiny amount of a drug.

Other groups gave shooting demonstrations and the SWAT team, in uniform from head to toe, blew up a door. The noise from the explosion was so frightening, I believe that if someone had been inside the room, he could have died from shock. The finale was the arrival of a S&R helicopter in the middle of the field!

Following a most delicious barbecue cooked by Joe Solis of Monte Vista Market, the silent auction closed.

Many of the live auction items were donations of food, wine and hotel stays, and auctioneer Alan Richmond took bids on them with aplomb.

Sheriff Norman Hicks gave plaques to James Baker, Tom Derring, Monte Reitz and Roger and Dodie Williams for their outstanding dedication and support, followed by Marti Haskill who lauded Ed Haber, Roger Williams and Robert Sageman, for originating the Advisory Council in 1985. Many other people who helped create the fundraiser were thanked, including John Auld-Sussot, Sal Balesteri, John Pisto, Bob Mulford, David Allard and Alan Richmond, among others.

This was an inspiring group of people to be with. If you are interested in joining the Advisory Council, call 649-3571.

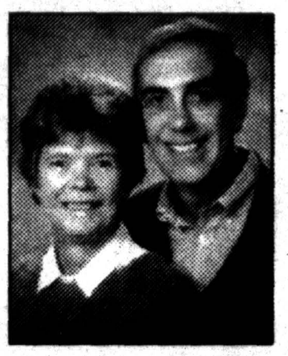
House Talk

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini



"ARE YOU crazy? Two million bucks and I have to fix it up?"

Sixty-three million-dollar-plus-homes sold on the Monterey Peninsula in 1996 and 20 more have closed escrow in 1997 as of this writing, a whopping 83 deals in less than 17 months. An enormous amount of money has changed hands between sellers happy to cash in on substantial real estate investments and buyers delighted to fulfill their Monterey Peninsula dreams

It is not always like this. The marketing of homes of a million dollars or more is a tricky business. Although homes in this price category are usually extremely attractive and in outstanding locations, they are not always easy to move. Market conditions are absolutely king.

There is the natural turn-over of expensive properties, so there is usually something going on. But inasmuch as the market for homes in the lofty price categories has little to do with shelter and everything to do with satisfaction, for that market to thrive there has to be plenty of disposable income floating around. In addition, people need to be feeling good about themselves, the present and the future. It is not often that all of these factors come together at once.

Five Years of Numbers

We wish we had ten years of numbers for the million dollar plus category, but unfortunately we are only able conveniently to research this segment of the market back to 1992.

These five-and-one-half years, however, show us just how much conditions can change in relatively short periods of time.

In 1992, a grim year in real estate all over California (less grim here than in most of the state), only 16 properties sold for more than one million dollars on the Monterey Peninsula, five in Carmel, five in Pebble Beach, three each on the South Coast and along the Salinas/Monterey Highway.

Contrast 1992's 16 sales, 1993's 34 sales and 1995's 29 sales with the 63 in 1996 and the 20 so far in 1997, and you will instantly see how extraordinary current times are in this market. The one bright spot during this period, other

CARMEL PIONEERS' DILEMMA: Which of 1,600 homesites to call their own?

By KIRSTIE WILDE

IN THE lobby of the Sunset Center Auditorium there hangs a picture of a small building, nestled among the trees at the crest of a large sand dune.

Few patrons realize that this unpretentious building is one of the most significant in Carmel-by-the Sea's history. It may well be the oldest structure in the village, and its history goes back even farther than the founding of Carmel.

For many years, the tiny cottage belonged to the King and Queen of Carmel, Frank and Jane Gallatin Powers. He owned virtually the whole town and she devoted herself to turning Carmel into a haven for artists, writers and poets.

In fact, the Powers at one time held the deeds to more than 1,600 Carmel lots, and had their pick of any of them for their personal residence. They chose to live among the sand dunes west of North San Antonio Avenue, just on the Carmel side of the present-day gate into Pebble Beach.

ERIN GAFILL COLLECTION

Frank and Jane Powers, real estate developers and patrons of the arts in early Carmel.

Grand Plan for Carmel

"The Dunes" was just one piece of Frank Powers' grand plan for Carmel. At the turn of the century, the 37-year-old Powers was in the process of buying virtually the entire city of Carmel.

Why was an attorney with a booming San Francisco law practice buying a "paper town," a failing seaside resort by Carmelo Bay? It was to make money, of course.

Powers was certain that a Southern Pacific Railway extension from Pacific Grove to Carmel was about to be built. In a 1903 sales brochure his company announced, "A railroad will undoubtedly reach Carmel Mission, through our property, within two years." It didn't happen within two years (or ever, for that matter) but Powers vigorously lobbied Southern Pacific to build the line at least through Pebble Beach for another decade.

In a 1916 map of Del Monte Forest, the rail line was projected to run from Lake Majella (south of Pacific Grove) through Pebble Beach to within 2,000 feet of the Lodge, crossing Pescadero Canyon, and entering Carmel through the Carmel Gate (just a few yards from the house and barn the Powers would call home.)

Bringing wealthy San Franciscans to Carmel, showing them the fantastic scenery, and selling them homesites would occupy Frank Powers from 1900 until his death in 1920. In one of his early brochures, he extolled the virtues of the new town, and showed examples of some of the homes that had already been built (and their prominent owners). David Starr Jordan (president of the newly-created Stanford University) built a home in Carmel, as did college president Guido Marx, Judge Charles Clark, Architect W. Van Horn, novelist Mary McGowan Cook, writers Josephine Foster and Vera Connolly, artist Sydney Yard, poet George Sterling and others. Two homes were built by E.K.Walkington and Col. Robert D. Fry, whose occupations were described simply as "Capitalists."

Powers made sure there was an attractive hotel to house his guests—the Pine Inn was refurbished and moved to its present site on Ocean Ave. Powers saw to it that the telephone lines were up a few weeks later; then the water system went in, and the real marketing of homesites began.

Supplying the materials

While urging people to build homes, Powers and his partner, J. F. Devendorf, took an important step to assure a ready supply of construction materials: they built a lumber yard in Monterey. On October 13, 1903, a shipment of 350,000 feet of pine and redwood lumber arrived for the Carmel Development Company's yard . . . ready for the families who would construct their summer bungalows in Carmel-by-the-

Real estate dream comes true for CV Racquet Club

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

AFTER 29 years of doing business on rented land, Carmel Valley Racquet and Health Club has closed escrow on a deal that gives it ownership of the 13 acres that lie underneath the club's sixteen tennis courts, club house, fitness rooms and 2 swimming pools.

Dennis and Jan Shepherd say they've wanted to buy the land for all 21 years they've operated the club. It's much easier to plan for the future, they say, without the uncertainty of owning buildings but not the ground they stand on.

"The land was part of Rancho San Carlos, and I was unable to buy it from the Ranch's previous owners," Dennis Shepherd told the Pine Cone. "But the new Rancho San Carlos owners were receptive, and we closed escrow on April 30," Shepherd said.

Now that land ownership isn't a concern, Shepherd says he plans to make major improvements to the club's facilities.

"We'll be going through the permit process this summer for additional fitness facilities and changes to a few of our tennis courts and our swimming pools.

"These improvements will make it possible for us to meet the needs of our members and the community in the future," Shepherd said.

The very popular club is located on Rancho San Carlos road just a mile off Carmel Valley Road. "Our success is partly due to our great location . . . very close to town, but out of the fog!" Shepherd exulted.

Carmel woman waits to hear if colossal lemon will make record book

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WHEN DORIS and Sal Nicita discovered a giant lemon growing on their tree, they decided to hold off on making the lemonade. Instead, the Carmel couple hopes their distinctive fruit will make it into the Guiness Book of World Records.

Soon after this picture was taken, Dorris Nicita picked the giant lemon she grew in her Mission Fields yard. The lemon's fate is in the hands of officials in London.

When the Nicitas first noticed the abnormally large lemon growing in their Mission Fields backyard, they decided to watch it grow.

"Our garden seemed to flourish after the 1995 floods. So we didn't pick the lemon out of curiosity to see how big it would get," Doris Nicita said.

Their patience paid off as they witnessed the lemon grow to twenty-one inches around. The couple worried that the coconut-sized lemon would break its branch so they constructed a gauze sling to support the fruit.

Months later, the lemon finally stopped growing. "We had to pick it before it shriveled and died," Nicita said.

They took the lemon to the Monterey County Agricultural Commissioner in Salinas for a weigh-in and circumference check.

The Nicitas left with an official letter stating that their lemon weighed 3.872 pounds and was 21 and 7/8 inches around.

The record-holding lemon now listed in the Guiness Book of World Record's weighed eight pounds and eight ounces. But there is currently no record listed for "lemon circumference," so the Nicitas are hoping to create a new category.

"Our lemon doesn't even come close in weight, but they may give it credit for its size. I called their office, and someone at Guiness said they would have to ask if they could do that," Mrs. Nicita said.

A copy of the official Monterey County letter was sent off to the Guinness book's offices in London last week. Doris Nicita is waiting anxiously for a reply.

POWERS

Sea.

According to local historian Elena Lagorio, Powers and Devendorf also had plans to build a "limesand" brick yard on Carmel beach. Thankfully that never happened, and after the Great San Francisco Earthquake of 1906, there wasn't much demand for brick houses in California anyway.

Frank and Jane had special plans for their beach ranch: They staked out 9 acres for their home, which included an old barn built by the original Irish squatters who arrived in Carmel in the 1840's. Frank also wanted to be surrounded by an exclusive neighborhood (with more spacious homes than could fit on the tiny lots subdivided in the rest of Carmel) so he had his surveyors subdivide the rest of the ranch into 12 "Villa Lots," each about one acre.

PAT HATHAWAY COLLECTION

An early Carmel Development Company sales brochure.

But moving in was another matter. The Murphy house and barn were at that time "rustic," to say the least . . . part of the ranch house even had a dirt floor. Jane Gallatin Powers, a wealthy woman educated in Europe (and who grew up in the future governor's mansion in Sacramento) didn't turn up her nose and build a brand-new mansion for herself in Carmel.

Preservation a goal

Instead she and her husband made it known that they were "anxious to preserve the area's historic interest and make Carmel-by-the-Sea a center for people of artistic temperament." So she restored the house, and filled it with antiques from old Spanish-California families (Escobar, Gomez, Martinez and others), along with almost 200 ancient candelabra in brass, pewter, copper, and iron.

Frank and Jane also turned the old pine-log Murphy barn into the first artist's studio in Carmel, and its story is somewhat scandalous, according to their descendants. Jane was an accomplished painter, and opened her home to all manner of poets, artists, writers and bohemians. Poet George Sterling was her good friend and lived just down the path; Mary Austin wrote in her tree-top nearby; Jack London was a frequent guest.

Carmel's first art atudio?

According to her great, great, granddaughter Erin Gafill, Jane had a love affair and ran off to Europe with a painter named Funk, leaving her children behind in Carmel. Eventually, Jane left Mr. Funk and came back to her family. As part of the reconciliation with his wife (the family theory goes), Frank turned the old barn into an art studio, "to keep her happy and at home in Carmel."

The year the old barn became an art studio is not documented, but it was photographed in September, 1905, when Edgar A. Cohen, a visiting photographer from

Alameda, took pictures of the burgeoning resort Carmel-by-the-Sea, including the gorgeous scenery around The Dunes.

A 1906 article in the San Francisco Call described the transformation of the barn into Jane's art studio, and made it clear she revered the old buildings and wanted their character preserved: "The studio is in a barn of rough-hewn pine logs, which has been built and rebuilt, and still made to preserve its original appearance. Its door bears a rough iron knocker and is curiously studded with beaten spikeheads." (That door and spikes still adorn the front door today.)

A city of artists

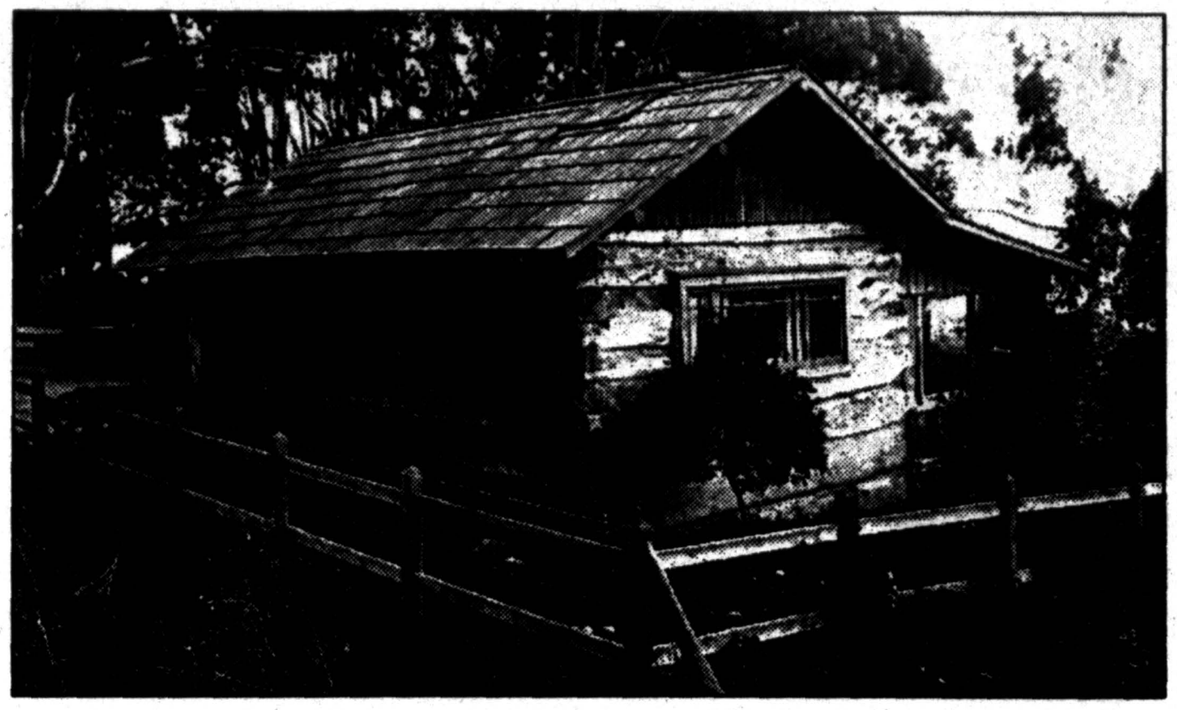
It was during this time that Jane began her work with the Arts and Crafts Club of Carmel. She was a founding member and was elected Vice-President at the club's first meeting in 1905. (Frank owned the land on Casanova and Eighth that the club bought for $600 in 1907. The members built their clubhouse for $2,500, and it was officially opened on August 1, 1907, with an exhibition of its members' works.)

The club became the center for the arts, including theater, in early Carmel. Both Jane and Frank took part in productions at the club, and later at the Forest Theater (which Frank had also owned).

Jane divided her time between painting in her incomparable studio, and promoting the evolution of Carmel-by-the-Sea as an art colony. The studios of many of her San Francisco artist friends had burned in the 1906 earthquake, and she convinced them to come to Carmel. Jane may be the best reason Carmel doesn't look like Sand City today!

The San Francisco Call of January 14, 1906, devoted a full page to the "Artists, Poets and Writers of Carmel-by-the-Sea," complete with pictures of George Sterling, Mary Austin, Jack London and Jimmie Hopper, not to mention Carmel beach and its (by then) famous Monterey Cypress trees.

The paper noted that "Mrs. Frank Powers, the artist, is revamping the old ranch house on San Antonio into a livable residence, and the log barn into a studio." By 1910, there were 375 other houses in Carmel, "60 percent built by citizens who are devoting their lives to work connected to the aesthetic arts." Jane Powers' dream of building a city of artists was definitely coming true.



The Powers cabin off North San Antonio Avenue in Carmel was converted into one of the city's first art studios. It is now part of a private home.

In her obituary, Jane was described as an "exponent of the modern school [who] exhibited her work both in France and Italy [and who] won high recognition throughout Europe for the quality of her painting."

Some would call art patron Jane Powers and real estate developer Frank Powers "Beauty and the Beast" by the politically correct standards of 1997. But would that be an accurate portrayal?

To be continued in the Real Estate section of next week's Carmel Pine Cone.

than the current market, was 1994 which logged a strong 44 million dollar plus sales. But that relatively good market was not able to sustain itself, and 1995 slid back to 29 sales.

11 Years on the Market

Another distinguishing factor of the 1996 market was that some properties which seemed to have been on the market forever got sold. We had an amusing office meeting at Del Monte Realty in the middle of last year which turned out to be an exercise of "Can you top this?" The spontaneous contest was "who had had put the oldest listing into escrow?"

It turned out that all the contestants were in the over one million dollar category. The topper was a property that had been on the market for 11 years. That news got a round of applause and some hearty bravos. Then we learned that another one of our old favorites, on the market a mere seven years, also had a deal on it. More bravos.

A Del Monte agent with a particularly wicked and acute wit summed up his experience with his multi-year listing that had just closed escrow by breaking down his costs over the period of the listing. His apparently hefty pay day netted him something like a dollar fifty seven. But imagine the loss if his listing had not been sold!!

This delightful cottage, exquisitely remodeled by Dan & Susan Ewell, can be found on 13th & Scenic in Carmel. It has three bedrooms, two baths, and sweeping views of Carmel Beach and the 18th fairway of the Pebble Beach links. It sold recently for $1,485,000.

What Makes a Million Dollar House?

Million dollar plus houses around here are different from their kin in other parts of the country. Coldwell Banker publishes an attractive magazine called Previews which features high-end listings throughout the United States and the world.

The properties one sees leafing through this magazine most would consider to be true estates with enormous garden areas, private settings and large and lavishly appointed houses.

We have these too, especially in Pebble Beach, but we also have 1,400 square foot cottages on Scenic in Carmel and absolute teardowns along the water on the South Coast. We have million dollar locations and million dollar homes.

So if you want to see that two million dollar fixer upper (actually it is only $1.995,000) just call us, and we will be delighted to show it to you.

But be prepared — you'll have to invest substantially more once you close the escrow!!

Dear Client:

The more things change, the more they stay the same. It couldn't be more true for your realty company, Contempo Carmel. We've made some changes, but the experienced professionals and the dedication with which we serve you stay the same.

As you may know, Contempo Realty Corp. was recently sold to a national franchise, Century 21. My husband and I have independently owned Contempo Carmel since it opened. We, along with the real estate professionals in our firm, decided our business would not be part of the sale. We believe we have more to offer you and the community as local decision-makers who live and work here.

To further enhance our ability to bring you the personal, responsive service you're accustomed to, we have chosen to associate with Alain Pinel Realtors, another family-owned, independent real estate firm in the Bay Area. While retaining 100% ownership in the Carmel office, we gain the strength of their six offices and 300 of the most accomplished agents in the business. Alain Pinel Realtors, Carmel, our new name, joins with Alain Pinel offices in Saratoga, Los Gatos, Palo Alto, Los Altos, Menlo Park/Atherton and Burlingame/San Mateo.

We believe you will benefit from our choice to remain locally-owned and managed. We appreciate the confidence you have in selecting us for your real estate needs.

Sincerely,

Judith Profeta

Letters to the Editor

Peninsula a 'cash cow'

Dear Editor:

I wish to respond to you May 8 editorial, "Carmel's Shrinking Voice."

This is not a new phenomenon as implied. In my 25 years of experience, the promise of increased property revenues emanating from continuing development on the Monterey Peninsula has driven land use decisions at the County level. Unfortunately, this fiscalization of land use will continue as long as four supervisors feel unrestrained by local preference.

Your solution, i.e. beefing up our numbers to increase political clout, still translates into one supervisorial vote.

Growth on the Peninsula is limited by its geographic placement, even if its residents shared your concept of civic duty as a willingness to subsidize the enormous costs necessary to accommodate the relentless pressures of development interests.

A more rational approach would seem to be political autonomy for the Monterey Peninsula where we would no longer be called upon to play cash cow to the rest of the County.

This is ultimately the only hope for protection of this precious area.

Janice O'Brien, Pebble Beach

(Publisher's note: our May 8 editorial addressed the problems Carmel will face as its relative portion of Monterey County's population is reduced as a result of population increases in the rest of the county. The editorial sought to make our readers aware of the numerous recent political events which demonstrated Carmel's "shrinking voice." The editorial did not advocate, and the Pine Cone certainly does not recommend, population growth in Carmel or in neighboring communities as a remedy for this problem.)

Keep Carmel events small

Dear Editor:

People have historically been attracted to Carmel because of the smallness of the houses, the ability to walk to get their mail and meet other Carmelites at the Post Office, the sense that it is not a city with used car lots, supermarkets, a karge performing arts center or many of the the things that most cities have. These people did not and most still do not feel deprived but instead pleased not to have to support such enterprises.

However, some people who did not choose to live here for our serene lifestyle but came, instead, to make money i.e. creating the Carmel Plaza, building large and speculative houses, supporting t-shirt shops and chain stores on Ocean Avenue; in general making changes that have not been improvements. The influence they have had with their loud voices and "expert" ideas have had a great affect on the elected, appointed and hired members of Carmel government who have quoted these ideas and said, "Carmel must keep up with the times."

Now the final indignity is the attack on Sunset Auditorium, a venue that has afforded the city a cultural and artistic reputation. There had been very few complaints about the acoustics until the last few years. Before that the Bach festival was so popular that the one-week program had to be extended to three weeks long before the present conductor came along

If the theatre is not large enough for major performing companies why do they have to perform in Carmel? A symphony orchestra should have a large auditoirum, how will fifty more seats make Sunset any more appropriate? Let us keep our cultural events in the proper scale for our residential village.

Harriet Shanner, Carmel
